MORE JOBS, PRICE STABILITY

New Proposals Favor West

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government met Parliament today by assigning "the highest priority" to reducing unemployment, containing inflation, and reorganizing existing social security programs.

In a proposal-packed throne speech opening the 29th Parliament, the government dedicated itself to expanding new job opportunities, promoting economic growth, attaining "reasonable price stability" and ensuring that all regions of the country benefit from the resulting prosperity.

The speech referred specifically to Western economic development.

"The government will propose to the governments of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba that they join with it in the convening of a conference on Western economic opportunities."

The meeting, suggested for the coming summer, would consider "concrete programs for stimulating and broadening the economic and industrial base of Western Canada."

The speech also indicated an overhaul of the regional economic expansion program. The department will be "decentralized to a greater degree to be in a better position to identify opportunities for economic development." There would be a review of research and development incentive programs "to improve their effectiveness."

Legislation to provide for a screening of foreign takeovers, presumably the same bill as introduced in the last session, would come before the new session. There would be the requirement that a majority of directors of federally-incorporated companies be Canadian.

The speech said the government will meet with the provincial governments in five regions of the country to examine the impact of freight rates on economic development and consumer prices. The railways have agreed to participate.

In the area of social policy, the government said the entire social security system, both federal and provincial elements, "must be reconsidered and reorganized, and made more sensitive to the needs of people in different parts of the country."

The system must ensure people who cannot work, such as the aged, the blind and the disabled, "a compassionate and equitable guaranteed annual income." For those who can work, the system must "contain incentives to work and a greater emphasis on the need to get people who are on social aid back to work."

There must also be "a fair and just relationship" between the incomes of people who are working near the minimum wage, the guaranteed incomes assured to those who cannot work, and the allowances paid to those who can work but are unemployed.

". . . It must be recognized that provinces may wish to have the structures of social security vary in accordance with the social needs, income standards and the cost of living in different communities."

Legislation would be introduced "to clarify certain aspects of the federal unemployment insurance plan and to prevent abuses that have not been overcome by the administrative actions already taken."

A new family-income security plan would be introduced. The speech did not indicate whether this would be the one defeated, by one vote, in the last session.

Subject to agreements with the provinces, the Canada Pension Plan would be changed to provide higher

'GIVE PARK NAME WITH SOME SNAP'

In a letter to Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, provincial resources minister Bob Williams said the present name is "rather colorless and meaningless" with a "commercial and international connotation."

Williams said in his letter, dated Dec. 27, that he prefers Wickaninnish or Maquinna, both names of former West Coast Indian chiefs.

Nixon Warns Doves

The Nixon administration has charged that the new surge of Democratic demands in Congress for a quick end to the Vietnam war may result in "possibly prolonging the negotiations".

The warning was issued on Nixon's behalf by White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler as Senate Democrats applied rising pressure on the peace question.

The Democrats indicated Congress should try to end the United States involvement in Vietnam unless a settlement is negotiated by Jan. 20, when Nixon begins his second term.

Democratic senators planned to consider today a proposal by Senator Edward M. Kennedy that would make it the policy of Congress to cut off all money for the Vietnam war immediately.

The only conditions on the cutoff, adopted by Democrats in the House of Representatives would be release of U.S. war prisoners and safe conduct for withdrawing U.S. forces.

Commenting on the Jan. 20 deadline, Ziegler said: "We are not going to set up an artificial timetable; we didn't do it in the elections and we won't now."

With negotiations due to resume in Paris on Monday, he said, "the president must proceed with negotiations and the policy he considers to be the right policy."

Ziegler, reading from notes, repeated more than a half dozen times, with slight variations, that "in such a sensitive stage of negotiations, members of Congress should ask themselves if they want to take the responsibility of raising doubts in the minds of the North Vietnamese about the U.S. position and thereby possibly prolonging the negotiations."

"Our objective is to achieve a negotiated settlement," the spokesman reiterated; "there can only be one negotiator."

In Paris, South Vietnam negotiator Pham Dang Lam demanded today that North Vietnam withdraw all of its military forces from the south and recognize the south as a fully independent nation — a demand Hanoi has repeatedly rejected.

The restatement at today's weekly semi-public session of the Paris talks of President Nguyen Van Thieu's undiminished conditions for peace was an indication of the further hard bargaining lying ahead for Henry Kissinger when he meets Hanoi's Le Duc Tho.

Washington administration officials already were warning against undue optimism and Ambassador William Por-

$110,000 home goes up in flames

Loss of $140,000 In Saanich Fire

A $110,000 luxury Gordon Head home is a total loss following an early morning fire on Vantreight Drive.

Saanich fire department were called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Towns, 4603 Vantreight at 2:50 a.m. Shortly after their arrival, the house's oil furnace exploded.

"From then on, it was a losing battle with the wind off the water," said Fire Chief Harold Gains.

The home's only occupant, Terry Towns, 17-year-old son of the owners of the property, escaped through a lower window unharmed as firemen appeared on the scene.

Firefighters were hampered by bitterly cold sea winds that turned "firemen into walking icicles," said the chief. Almost as soon as water was turned on the fire, it turned to ice.

Damage to contents, including antiques in the Towns' home was estimated at $30,000 today. A fuller list of damages still awaits an inspection by a B.C. fire marshal.

The Towns' property and contents were fully insured, Saanich fire department said.

A witness to the fire's outbreak, neighbor Betty Clazie, termed the scene "such a fantastic sight I could hardly believe my eyes."

She and her husband John, live at 4610 Vantreight, 150 yards from the scene of the disaster. They were awakened in the early hours by the crackling of the fire. It was Mr. Clazie who gave the fire alarm.

Muammar Kadafi, the Libyan leader, sent a jet for Mintoff. The purpose of the visit was not announced, but it was assumed that it was connected with Mintoff's demand for more rent for the British bases. He wants another 10 per cent to compensate for the devaluation of the pound.

CAIRO STUDENTS IN NEW CLASHES

CAIRO (Reuter) — Police clashed with students at Ein Shams University today on the second day of anti-government student demonstrations in the Egyptian capital.

Informed sources said about 1,500 students remained on the campus despite a government order Wednesday closing all the country's universities.

The order followed bloody clashes between police and more than 3,000 Cairo University students.

Several students and police were injured and a few students were seen being loaded into police vehicles at Ein Shams this morning. But during the early afternoon, witnesses said, all appeared quiet.

Cairo University was tense today but there was no sign of further student action. The students are demanding the release of dozens of their colleagues they say are being held by the authorities following the distribution of anti-state leaflets.

Ex-Legislator Dies at 93

GOLDEN (CP) — Thomas King, former British Columbia cabinet minister, has died in Golden at the age of 93.

King was first elected to the legislature for Columbia as a Liberal in 1931 and contested five more elections before retiring in 1952. He served at one time as minister of public works and railways.

A native of Angus, Ont., he moved to Vancouver in 1897 and two years later he settled in Golden.

All 4 Parties Back Lamoureux

OTTAWA (CP) — Lucien Lamoureux, with the approval and praise of the four political parties, again was elected Commons Speaker today during the ritualistic opening of Canada's 29th Parliament.

Prime Minister Trudeau described the bilingual independent member for Stormont-Dundas as perhaps the "greatest Speaker since Confederation" in a speech nominating Lamoureux.

His sentiments were reflected in speeches by Conservative Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, New Democrat Leader David Lewis and Real Caouette, leader of the Social Credit party.

Lamoureux replied to their tributes with a plea for co-operation and respect for tradition by all members in this House of minorities.

Former Tory Leader George Drew Dies

Times News Services

TORONTO — Former premier and one-time national Progressive Conservative leader George Drew, 78, died today in a Toronto hospital where he had been a patient since suffering a heart attack, Nov. 19.

Drew was national leader of the Progressive Conservative party between 1948 and 1956.

As premier of Ontario before that, his victory in the provincial general election of 1943 began an unbroken 29 years of Conservative government in the province.

His death followed by only eight days that of former prime minister Lester B. Pearson, an old House of Commons opponent.

In a long period of public life after service in the First World War, Drew followed a varied career as an author, lawyer, civil servant and municipal official. He was mayor of his native city of Guelph, Ont., at the age of 31.

He became leader of the Ontario Conservative party in 1938 and five years later toppled the Liberal government of Harry Nixon.

The Conservatives have been in power in Ontario ever since.

After five years as premier, he took over leadership of the party nationally following the resignation of John Bracken, former Liberal-Progressive premier of Manitoba.

Drew's career as Ontario premier was at times tempestuous as he belligerently tackled the powerful federal government of Liberal W. L. Mackenzie King and crashed head on with a strong CCF co-operative Commonwealth Federation group that formed the official opposition when he took office with a minority government.

The 1946 federal-provincial conference to revise wartime tax agreements foundered on his refusal, along with that of Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, to accept federal proposals.

In provincial politics, the CCF accused him of maintaining a "Gestapo," but in a lurid election campaign in 1945 he won a decisive victory and beat down the CCF to the third position behind the Liberals.

His second administration brought the controversial introduction of cocktail bars to Ontario. Feelings ran so high on this issue that in the 1948 general election, though Drew's administration was returned with a reduced majority, he lost his Toronto High Park seat to a CCF temperance candidate.

His almost eight years as opposition leader in the Commons, during which the Liberals won landslide victories at the polls in 1949 and 1953, were turbulent, as was his later diplomatic career.

He was 62 when, in 1956, he made the "heartbreaking decision" of resigning after a series of illnesses and rigorous parliamentary sessions left him ailing and exhausted.

The next year he was named high commissioner to the United Kingdom by John Diefenbaker, an old colleague and leadership rival who had broken the Liberal grip on office in 1957.

He stayed in London until early 1964.

RELIGION BUGS REDS

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union displayed concern today that Western radio broadcasts with religious themes are having some effect on Soviet citizens.

An article in the trade union newspaper Trud attacked the broadcasts as "purposeful propaganda of militant anti-Communists striving to undermine socialism from within."

Province May Appeal Salt Spring Ruling

The provincial government may appeal a decision by Judge M. L. T. Drake allowing the sale of 82 quarter-acre lots on Salt Spring Island.

The parcel of land in question, near Walker's Hook four miles north of Ganges, and owned by local building contractor A. S. Bains and lawyer Robert Heath, was approved for subdividing in 1891 under the name of Grantsville.

In July of this year the superintendent of insurance — a government official with power to freeze land sales — froze the sale of lots temporarily because there were no sewage facilities or water supplies on them, and it was not possible to obtain building permits.

The developers appealed the ruling in county court Dec. 11 and on Dec. 22 the judge allowed the appeal.

The developers appealed the ruling in country court Dec. 11 and on Dec. 22 the judge allowed the appeal saying, "It is clear (in the prospectus) that no purchaser of a lot in the subdivision would be able to construct any sort of permanent dwelling now — or indeed in the foreseeable future."

Lawyer Brian Smith, representing the government in the case, said he is awaiting the government's decision on whether or not to appeal the judge's ruling.

He said the appeal would be based on an "erroneous decision in law on the scope of the superintendent's power."

Although the judge said the prospectus had been approved, and the conditions of the sale were clearly outlined, Smith termed this type of sale a "commercial rip-off" and said the superintendent has the authority to refuse the sale if it's "generally in the public interest."

Chief Medical Health Officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread testified Dec. 11 that he had visited the subdivision and had found that the lots were generally too small to contain both a proper septic tank and tile field for sewage disposal and a well for water.

Regulations are that a well must be at least 100 feet from sewage disposal facilities and often, for safety, it is necessary to place the two 300 feet apart, he said.

This could be accomplished by placing them at opposite ends of each lot but because the lots are close together only about one-third of them could be serviced, he testified.

Whitbread said today, if the government does appeal Drake's ruling, the health board's position is unchanged.

Heath said there is a possibility the promoters may put in a water system but they are under no obligation to do so.

Heath said there is still a possibility that the promoters will put in a water system but they are under no obligation to do so.

Bains said, "These are a speculative type of lot" and "they even have to sign a letter saying that they can't apply for a building permit."

"This is not a subdivision like you see in the city. It's a recreation facility . . . it's a retreat," he said.

Superintendent of Insurance Tom Cantell said, "I doubt that anybody who buys a lot there is going to want to camp on it. They're going to want to build."

He said if the government decides to appeal the case he will freeze the sale of lots until the matter is settled.

UNIONS QUERY HEALTH PLANS

The British Columbia Federation of Labor will be asked to investigate discriminatory features of union health and welfare plans.

The move came at the Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night, after delegates voted to go into a closed session which lasted 45 minutes.

Today, asked what was decided, council secretary Larry Ryan said delegates approved a motion which said the council "deplores and requests the B.C. Federation of Labor to investigate union health and welfare plans that discriminate against individuals that are not members of the union-sponsored plans."

He declined to expand or comment on the motion "because the council went into committee of the whole."

UVic Slates Parliament

Another Liberal minority government will sit in power over the weekend when the University of Victoria holds their sixth model parliament in the legislative buildings.

The two-day sitting in the legislative chambers will be open to the public and session times are Saturday 9:30 a.m. to 12:30, 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. and Sunday 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 and 2 to 5 p.m.

Following student elections the model federal parliament will include 21 Liberals under Dolly Marks, 17 NDP under Ron Armstrong and 12 Conservatives under John McVie.

Jobless Peak Didn't Come

An expected peak in unemployment in the Lower Mainland area during December and January just isn't materializing, said the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) today.

About 80 casual employees in the Vancouver, Burnaby and New Westminster UIC offices, hired to handle the expected jump in enquiries about unemployment insurance, are being laid off.

Unaudited UIC figures for December show unemployment in the province was not much different than it was in December, 1971, a spokesman said. Then, there were 85,972 on the unemployment insurance rolls.

The mild winter this year may have been a factor keeping unemployment from taking its expected jump, said the spokesman. People working in the interior or outdoors who normally come to Vancouver in December to go on unemployment, may have been able to continue working this year, he said.

Any drop in expected numbers of unemployed hasn't affected Victoria, said Alison Fink, Victoria district manager of the UIC.

"Certainly our load was not down," she said, and no casual employees will be laid off by the Victoria office. Casual employees make up about half of the 100-odd staff of the office in winter, said Miss Fink.

Extra Seat for Island Draws MPs' Approval

Favorable reaction was registered today by the four Island MPs affected by the proposed electoral realignment which will give Vancouver Island a fifth, shared seat in the House of Commons.

"I think its wonderful that there'll be another constituency on the Island," Esquimalt-Saanich MP Donald Munro said from Ottawa today.

It includes the northern part of Vancouver Island and the Powell River-Sunshine Coast area of the mainland.

Alberni will now be in the same riding as Nanaimo, which is no longer included in the Cowichan-Malahat-the Islands constituency.

"My initial reaction, given the population distribution, is that the shift seems logical," Comox-Alberni MP Tom Barnett said.

"There's a certain nostalgia about changing your constituents," Barnett said, "but a good part of what they're proposing concerns commonality of interests.

"There's an association between Powell River and Comox — they're both pulp and paper towns."

Barnett agreed the shift of Hornby and Denman Islands to the Nanaimo-Alberni riding might be a problem since the islands seem more closely tied to the Comox region, but said he felt such details could be worked out at tthe public hearings to be held next month.

"It's in the best interests of my riding," Henry Olaussen, Coast Chilcotin MP said.

"The coast has always been like an unwanted prima donna. We were mixed with the Cariboo before with nothing in common.

"We have a lot in common with the Island," Olaussen continued. "And federally we're more concerned with people problems that pertain to Canada as a whole."

Tommy Douglas, MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-the-Islands, said he was happy about the new seat but sorry that the realignment meant losing Nanaimo from his riding.

"Protests will definitely be made about where they've drawn the line," Douglas said.

"Some parts, the suburbs, of Nanaimo are in differen ridings. I think the commission would have done better to have gotten into a car and driven around the area. It seems they didn't realize there's a range of mountains running down the centre of the Island."

Douglas said he flet there was no political bias or "sunister design" the commission's decisions, and other MPs agreed the commission was impartial.

All four MPs expressed anger at not being given a copy of the new electoral map, which may be altered following public hearings, in February and will probably not come into effect until early next year.

"I think as a matter of courtesy the seated members should have been given a map instead of having to hear about through the newspapers," Munro said.

Munro said the loss of View Royal in his constituency, was a matter of necessity due to population.

"There has to be a boundary," he explained, "and as long as voters have adequate knowledge of where they belong it should work out. We were such a big constituency before."

There are no changes in the Victoria riding.

ter, the chief U.S. negotiator, said in a sombre speech today, "I am not inclined at all to underestimate the problems which exist and which will face us still for some time." He did not endorse the Saigon demands in his statement.

Meanwhile on the war front, U.S. warplanes took advantage of clearing weather to step up attacks south of North Vietnam's 20th parallel bombing boundary that runs 65 miles south of Hanoi.

In ground action in South Vietnam, the Saigon command said today North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces stepped up their attacks Wednesday and early today to the highest point in more than two months. A command spokesman listed 116 "enemy-initiated incidents" between dawn Wednesday and daybreak today.

The U.S. command reported 106 jet fighters and 11 waves of B-52s lashed North Vietnam's lower panhandle. Navy pilots sank 13 supply barges at the mouth of the Sonng Ma River, just below the 20th parallel. Trucks in parking lots and on the highways were bombed by other navy air force planes and pilots reported destroying "numerous" vehicles in the raids.

The U.S. command said today marked the 263rd consecutive day of the U.S. bombing campaign over North Vietnam ordered by Nixon April 6 in reply to the Communist spring offensive in South Vietnam.

pensions for widows, and the disabled.

The prime minister would propose a spring meeting with provincial premiers "to plan further steps in the harmonization of goals, policies and programs for the benefit of all Canadians, particularly in fields that bear on the responsibilities of both levels of governments."

Parliament would be asked to confirm the basic principles of the bilingualism program in the public service.

And, under the objectives of the Official Languages Act, provinces will be offered further assistance to ensure that Canadians can educate their children in the language of their choice; that students can learn, as a second language, the other official language and that "provincial governments can develop an increased capacity to serve their citizens in both official languages, as may be required."

In the field of housing the speech forecasts, in co-operation with the provinces, a series of measures to help home owners.

These would be assistance in providing low-cost housing and other accommodation for senior citizens, assistance to low-and-moderate-income families, new incentives through co-operatives and non-profit corporations, assistance in rehabilitating older neighborhoods, a land-assembly program and encouragement to investors to make more money available for house-buyers.

Glasses Ordered By Hotel Group

The Liquor Control Board is not ordering the special glasses with a Plimsoll line that will appear in British Columbia beer parlors this spring.

The glasses have been ordered by the B.C. Hotels Association and several hotel supply wholesalers, not by the LCB as reported in Wednesday's Times.

Scarf Kills Boy

FAIRVIEW, Alta. (CP) — A 12-year-old youth from Fort Nelson, B.C., was killed when the scarf he was wearing became tangled in the starting mechanism of a snowmobile.

RCMP identified the youth as Terry Allan Roberts.

A police spokesman said the youth was driving the machine on a local golf course and the accident occurred when he stopped to make adjustments to the machine's exhaust system.

Remember the old way of borrowing, when you had to have it to get it?

At Toronto Dominion, that kind of thinking has gone by the boards. TD's Cash-flow way to borrow puts the emphasis where it belongs. On the money you earn. Here's how it works:

You figure out the money you'll have coming in over the period of a year. And how much you plan to spend during this period. The difference between your income and your outgo is a guide to the amount you can comfortably repay when you borrow. And that's really about all we need to know for a Cash-flow Loan. So if there's something you've been thinking about that requires more money than you have at the moment, talk to your TD Manager. He'll help you work out a Cash-flow Loan. That's Toronto Dominion's new way to borrow. If it helps you live the way you want to live, we think it makes good sense.

Sports Complex Referendum Not on Elford's Forecast

For the first time since 1964 the inaugural address of Oak Bay's mayor will not include the forecast that a money referendum for a recreation centre will be put before the taxpayers during the year.

Mayor Frances Elford said today she had checked the records and found that such a forecast had not been made since 1964. She now felt it would be "very difficult" to make such a prediction at Monday's inaugural council meeting.

"I haven't any firm opinion on a referendum at all," she said, "but I do know that every member of council wants a sports complex."

She pointed out that the provincial government's proposed policy to pay one third the costs of complexes costing $1 million or less could still be a deciding factor.

She said council would continue to be guided by the recommendations of its special recreation complex committee.

Ald. Douglas Watts, senior alderman on council, is the chairman. Other members are Ald. Brian Smith, Ald. Shirley Dowell, Ald. Douglas McLelland; Kyrle Symons, chairman of Oak Bay's recreation commission and Bill Young.

Mrs. Elford said only two lots remained to be bought for the proposed site near the Oak Bay junior high school.

Oak Bay council held an informal meeting Wednesday night to consider who would head the various standing committees.

Mayor Elford said that, with the council comprising the same membership as before the December election, there would be no significant changes in committee chairmen.

One change will require an amendment to the bylaw governing membership on the municipality's recreation commission.

The bylaw now calls for a membership of 11—one alderman, one representative of the Greater Victoria School Board and nine members-at-large.

The bylaw will be changed to allow two aldermen to serve on the commission.

Ald. McLelland represented the council in 1972 and was also chairman of council's parks and recreation committee. Ald. Dowell will now join him on the commission.

Mayor Elford said there was no particular significance in the boosting of council representation on the commission. The change would ensure that council would be represented at all times.

Council has earmarked monies raised from the sale of the controversial 9.3-acre Victorio Riding Academy site, saying they would be used to help build the proposed centre.

In 1972 council became locked in an impasse when the majority of council expressed opposition to highrise construction on the site.

In his pre-election campaigning, Watts said that the $2 million figure estimated for the proposed complex was too high.

He said that after studying methods used by Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd. to build their complex in Burnaby a revised figure of less than a $1 million would be more realistic.

notable exploits, two of them bitter attacks on federal Liberal governments before and during the Second World War that led to royal commissions.

One of his magazine articles led to an investigation of a 1938 defence department contract for Bren guns, a new and mobile form of machine-gun.

The commission recommended that munitions orders be handled by a separate defence purchasing board.

A second royal commission under Sir Lyman P. Duff held secret hearings into Drew's accusation that untrained men were included in the Canadian expedition to Hong Kong, which fell to the Japanese on Christmas Day, 1941.

The Duff report discredited his charges, but Drew reiterated them and was charged under the Defence of Canada Regulations.

Three weeks later, the charges were withdrawn, and in 1948 Maj.-Gen. C. M. Maltby, commander of British troops at Hong Kong, said the Canadian troops had arrived "inadequately trained for war."

Labrador Town Airlift Succeeds

GOOSE BAY, Nfld. (CP) "Everybody understands the emergency situation and we've had no complaints," President Bert Patey of Labrador Airways said today as he outlined progress of a food airlift to Nain that has disrupted the company's passenger and mail service throughout coastal Labrador.

A ski-equipped DC-3 chartered by Labrador Airways and two of the company's Otter aircraft are delivering necessities to the coastal community 200 miles north of this southern Labrador air base. About $300,000 worth of food and winter stores were lost in a fire early New Year's Eve. There were no injuries.

The DC-3, which arrived in Goose Bay Wednesday night from Ottawa, landed on the harbor ice at Nain today with 5,500 pounds of vegetables, canned goods and salt beef aboard.

The twin-engine plane was scheduled to make a second trip later today.

Mr. Patey said the plane will fly twice daily to Nain until all the supplies are delivered.

The Otters, normally used on passenger and mail services to the isolated communities up and down the Labrador coast have been taking supplies to Nain for the last several days.

"With the DC-3 taking off the pressure, we may be able to get the Otters back in the passenger service," Mr. Patey said in an interview.

Anti-Industry Charge Angers City Aldermen

City aldermen reacted angrily today to accusations by Victoria Labor Council that Victoria is interested only in tourism and in trying to "drive industry out." (See Page 15.)

"Why don't they come and ask us what we're doing instead of sounding off like that," commented Ald. Clyde Savage, who is responsible for tourism, trade and commerce.

"These people make me sick and tired. If we encourage development they say we're harming the environment, apparently overlooking the fact that construction provides jobs."

Savage said he has worked for an entire year toward the objective of establishing an industrial area "not only for Victoria but the whole island," and he is meeting today with three deputy ministers to try to enlist provincial help in attracting and keeping industry.

Against that background, the Labor Council's criticism was "way out of line," he said.

The condemnation of city council's attitude came at a Labor Council meeting Wednesday night, during discussion of the closure later this year of the Bapco Paint Ltd. factory in Victoria.

One delegate said elected officials have a responsibility to try to keep industry here because "once it's gone, it won't come back." Another claimed there is a determination on the part of some people to keep Victoria "a tourist-only town."

Both Savage and Ald. Ove Witt declared today, however, that there was no way city council could have prevented the Bapco move.

Saying he takes "very strong exception to that kind of garbage," Witt noted that the city has no power "to tell a huge, faceless corporation where they can put their companies."

Witt said Victoria city council is interested in and working on behalf of every section of the community, and to claim that it is responsible for declining industry is "utterly ridiculous."

Like Savage, he said he was aware of no direct efforts on the part of the Labor Council to seek the city's help in this problem.

Ald. Percy Frampton remarked that council is not interested in having industry here. But it does welcome light, non-polluting industries and there is space available in areas such as Bridge Street to accommodate them.

Answering points made by Savage and Witt, Labor Council president Jack Groves said they were wrong in claiming that there had been no attempt to air labor's concern at current trends in Victoria, or enlist city council's help.

"We met with them close to a year ago and told them Bapco were pulling out, but they swallowed the company's official line at that time and tried to make out there were no problems," Groves said.

He said the Labor Council had met frequently over the years with the mayors of the core municipalities "but there has been very little response from them in trying to do anything about industry."

The council was trying to show that there was little intermunicipal co-operation in establishing an industrial reserve, so that industry would have a stable, assured place in the community.

"If the city fathers think they can exist and maintain this city on tourist dollars alone the taxpayers are in for a big shock," Groves added.

. . . A Part of the Main

After many years of debate, hesitation and controversy, Britain has entered the European Community. It seemed a simple enough act in the end, yet it is a very complex one, both in its requirements and its repercussions. The known problems are formidable enough, entering as they do into Britain's economic, financial and historical fibre. But the potential problems and effects are still more hazardous: the fact is that Britain does not know exactly what it has joined, nor do its eight partners — two of them also new — in the Community.

The European Community has progressed beyond its original form — which was the European Coal and Steel Community, a rather limited concept. That was more than 20 years ago. A few years later came the European Economic Community, or Common Market, which Britain also refused to join, and the European Atomic Energy Community. By 1961 Britain, with Denmark, Norway and Ireland, decided to seek membership. But there followed the years of veto by President de Gaulle, and it was not until 1971 that a summit meeting of the existing Community partners gave Britain the go-ahead.

The British application had by no means been unanimous. Labor Leader Wilson had favored joining when he was prime minister, but later, to reconcile factions within his party, he raised objections. Conservative Prime Minister Heath meanwhile took over and was able to secure an affirmative majority in Parliament, despite widespread criticism from many sections of the public.

The benefits to Britain will be economic — promised capital investment and increased industrial exports among them. But agriculture, one of the main considerations of the continental members, will suffer unfavorable effects. Britain is a heavy importer of foodstuffs, and membership of the Community will mean higher food prices for Britons.

Politically, Britain may gain. As a small island in today's world dominated by the Soviet and American giants, the former hub of an empire has lost weight in international affairs. But as part of a European Community, and possibly a leading partner, Britain could have a greater voice in global matters.

The new Community of nine members, even in its present partially organized state, will be a considerable world entity. It will embrace an area of nearly 600,000 square miles, with a population of more than 250 million. It will export $63 billions worth of goods and services, and import $64 billions. It will produce 28 per cent of the world's exports and account for 24 per cent of global imports. It will be, by many standards, the largest united trading area in the world — and Britain will be an integral part of it, after completing the next half-dozen years of gradual immersion.

But economics is only one facet of the Community's crystal. The future possibilities in political union, in military policy, in influence on the world in general, have never yet been exactly defined. Even in trade, the Community has not yet demonstrated its eventual position. Will it become a "fortresss", keeping out other nations' goods with high tariffs? What will its ultimate attitude to emerging nations be, regardless of its present extension of associate status to many of them? Where will Canada stand?

The Community's chief international interests at the moment are its relationships with the Soviet Union and the United States. But the Mediterranean and the Middle East will require united European policies very soon. Japan and China will have to find a place — if only for trading — in Europe's new economic pattern.

The last meeting in Paris of the heads of the nine Community members issued a statement which said in part: "Europe must be able to make its voice heard in world affairs and to make an original contribution commensurate with its human, intellectual and material resources. It must affirm its own views in international relations, as befits its mission to be open to the world for progress, peace and co-operation".

But the members themselves could not come closer than generalities. With the question of, "Can it grow", must go the question, "Can it even hang together?" The program calls for "a European union by the end of the decade". Will this be a United States of Europe? One observer says that with the addition of Britain, the organization has now achieved the "critical mass" which could trigger the formation of a new European political identity. Whether or not this will come, Britain will be a part of the evolution, participating in possible benefits, and helping to direct the Community's destiny.

Blood Check?

No one will say that the anti-hijack metal detection device at Boston's Logan Airport wasn't functioning the other day.

Its bells rang and lights flashed when a soldier stepped up to it. First he removed his jacket with marksmanship and name badges. The alarms still sounded. Next he took off his dog tags. After four checks, all producing alarms, the cause was discovered — steel arch supports in his shoes.

As the devices become more sensitized, the only way to fly may be with iron-poor blood.

". . . would either of you gentlemen be after signing this petition protesting the violence in Vietnam . . .?"

BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Titan's Crumbling World

WASHINGTON — The largest fact in the United States today, coloring and comprehending all others, is not measured by any statistic, admitted by any stateman in public or perhaps consciously understood by the American people themselves. But the foreign visitor to Washington, free of partisanship, and likewise of responsibility, sees or vaguely senses the fact at once.

This nation, ostensibly the richest and most powerful in any recorded age, is tired, bruised and bewildered after four decades of ceaseless strain. The Great Depression, the New Deal, the second World War, the Cold War, the Korean War, the Cuban missile crisis, the ultimate agony of the Vietnam War and an inward social revolution that rises and falls but never ends — these repeated shocks and bitter disappointments of the past explain the confusion of the present and will produce unknown results in the future.

Already the first results can be seen in the preliminary withdrawal of American power from overseas commitments so lightly accepted when the United States seemed to dominate the world and was determined to save it, regardless of cost.

By Stealthy Step

Like those of the Roman Empire, in another time of excessive strain, the American legions are coming home. With infinite patience, step by stealthy step, President Nixon is revising his people's worldwide obligations because they can no longer be borne.

His task is far more difficult than it looks; also more dangerous. To withdraw into total isolation, as the United States withdrew after the First World War, would be easy — and disastrous. To withdraw partially, in good order and, if possible, leave no vacuums for the enemy to fill at leisure, no combustibles of future wars, must demand something like genius in the president and the highest wisdom in his people. Perhaps, indeed, it requires too much in both. However that may be, the partial, orderly retreat is under way, impelled by historic forces abroad and at home.

Abroad, the United States, once briefly unchallengeable in power and sure of its pre-destined mission, has been forced to recognize a second titan in Russia, and three potential titans in China, Japan and a new Western Europe, all of them on the make.

At home, it has been forced to recognize, even more clearly, that its own political, social and economic problems have been too long neglected, its resources squandered, its finances mismanaged, its budget distended, its currency eroded, its taxpayers exasperated, its wealth misused, its minorities inflamed.

The president, any president, must redress the balance of power abroad and at home, not because Mr. Nixon wants to, and certainly not as he had expected in his earlier days, but because he has no alternative. That is why his second term of office, with all these foreign and domestic problems clamoring for solution, will be harder than the first — the supreme test of his quality, his place in history.

Personal success or failure may not matter much to anyone except himself. But the success or failure of his policies and his nation in the affairs of a distracted little planet matters to every human being, and to none more directly than the human beings of Canada.

Over-simplifying such a huge and complex cargo of unsolved, and maybe insoluble, problems, putting them in rough perspective, it can be said that the United States is now trying to do, on a larger scale, what Rome, its historic predecessor, failed to do.

Roman military power seeped out of Britain, Europe and the Mediterranean heartland when Roman moral power was exhausted by too much success, too much easy wealth, too much greed and too many false gods. Neither the foreign nor the domestic problems were solved, and Rome fell, leaving darkness behind it for some ten centuries. Can the United States do better when its problems are even greater? Is President Nixon's "generation of peace" likely to endure as long as Augustus Caesar's Pax Romana when it is threatened by new, explosive forces on all sides?

Parallel Mood

Of course the parallel between ancient Rome and modern America is very rough and may turn out to be quite inaccurate but it haunts any man who thinks about events now moving throughout the world. In any case, the parallel between the mood of the Romans in their last days of empire and the mood of Americans in the first days of post-industrial revolution, must be essentially the same.

The American mood, for the same broad reasons, is bittersweet, compounded of towering material success, unprecedented but relatively declining power, almost unlimited affluence and yet a sense of failure in the final purpose, the true goal of man's life on earth.

Somewhere along the line, from the Pilgrim's landfall to Mr. Nixon's second term, the original secret, the so-called American Dream, has been mislaid. The titan is not only tired, for the time being at least, but disillusioned with himself and disappointed in a world that shows no gratitude for his boundless generosity, no recognition of his virtues, no charity for his vices.

But the secret, though mislaid, is not necessarily lost forever. A free society, despite its blunders and its weariness, still lives, is still the most flexible and revolutionary of these times despite its orthodox look; still contains a volcanic energy and a deep compassion despite its injustices. Above all, it is still capable of rebuilding itself by its own methods, within its own laws, as no rigid authoritarian society can hope to do. And no foreigner, without the titan's responsibilities, should underestimate his burden, or his strength.

(If the reader has followed these vagrant reports from Washington so far he may wonder what relevance they have to his troubled Canadian nation. With a little more patience he will soon see.)

HAROLD GREER

Mike Pearson's Other Side

TORONTO — The history books will tell you Lester Pearson was a great man who sometimes saved the world from war, and the history books are right. But if you were a reporter who was there for most of it, you might remember it rather differently.

You would remember his role during the Korean crisis at the United Nations in 1950 but you might also remember how, on the night train from Ottawa to New York, he had found you green with an upset stomach and no sleeping berth and had insisted on giving you his bedroom compartment.

The history books will tell you — or should — that Lester Pearson was instrumental in getting India and other third-world countries to support UN resistance to aggression in Korea. You will remember that but you will also remember how the UN in those days was at Great Neck, Long Island, miles and hours from New York, and how there was always a ministerial lift back to the city so you could get your copy filed before the next dawn arrived.

A King 'Message'

You will remember writing about how Pearson was leading Canada out of its isolationist tradition in world affairs, but you might have a more vivid memory of his telling, off-the-record, how he had had to go, very secretly, to see President Truman only a few years before to tell him Canada wanted off the Korean Rehabilitation Commisssion, because Prime Minister Mackenzie King had had a "message" from his late friend, President Roosevelt, that the next world war would come in Korea.

You will remember how the French were being defeated at Dienbienphu in Indo-China in 1954 and John Foster Dulles was thinking seriously of sending in an American atomic strike attack to save them from the Communist hordes, and how Lester Pearson had to talk him out of it during a luncheon between NATO sessions in Paris.

But what you remember best from that meeting is Pearson's recounting of how Dulles, noting that Canada was always criticizing him for lack of consultation, had complained that the Canadian government had unilaterally removed the lighthouse keeper from the St. Lawrence island where the Dulles family maintained a summer home. The keeper was an old family friend and Pearson had to promise to get him restored.

You will remember going on from that NATO session to the first Far Eastern Conference in Geneva at which the defeated French agreed to pull out of Indo-China and the Americans decided to replace them, thus beginning the agony of Vietnam.

That was a depressing conference but if you were a reporter who was there with Lester Pearson, you won't quite remember it that way.

You will prefer to remember the evening press briefings to which a colleague, well-fortified with Cinzano, would come and take copious notes and then depart, always leaving his hat and the notes behind. And how Pearson would anxiously try to find him despite your assurance that your colleague perhaps

Or the time you went with Pearson and some of his staff to one of those Alpine restaurants where you order trout and they then go and catch it, and how "McGuff" McGaughey, now ambassador to Israel, got to story-telling while waiting and knocked a carafe of wine into the ministerial lap. And how Pearson had said that under the circumstances he had better join the trout.

Or how when the conference was finally over and all the planes out of Geneva were full, Pearson went out of his way to give you a lift to Paris so you could get home in time for the birth of your daughter.

You will remember when he was campaigning in southern Ontario in the 1953 election and you drove him back to Toronto because he was president of the UN Assembly that year and had to go to New York. And you got to talking about McCarthyism and he told you, not for publication, that Elizabeth Bentley and the McCarthy-ites were referring to him when they claimed that an unnamed Canadian official had supplied information to a Communist espionage ring in Washington during the war.

A long time later you asked to be released from the confidence and you wrote the story because the McCarthy-ites were trying to blackmail the Canadian government with it, and publication was necessary to show what a smear story it was.

The history books will tell you that it was Lester Pearson's genius for diplomacy that led to the stopping of the British invasion of Egypt in 1956 and the creation of the UN Force in Suez. He got the Nobel Peace Prize for that and he deserved it, but if you were at the United Nations when he did it you may remember it rather differently.

Caught Eden's Reference

You may remember he got the idea for it by catching a vague reference in an Anthony Eden speech, which no one else had noticed, suggesting the British might welcome UN intervention.

You may remember how he forestalled John Foster Dulles from making a total condemnation of Britain by seizing the floor on a point of order just before Dulles was to speak and moving that the Assembly adjourn for dinner. And how, over the adjournment, he managed to talk Dulles into a more conciliatory position.

And you may remember how annoyed he got with the press for writing that Canada would only be sending a "typewriter" army to Suez, while using an aircraft carrier to get it there.

It was one of the few times he got annoyed at the press, although he had ample cause, like the time you wrote a piece for an American periodical expressing regret over his decision to leave foreign affairs and seek the Liberal Party leadership, and explaining it by saying that Lester Pearson, for all his blithe spirit, was yet an "ambitious man".

You may remember that some time after the piece was published you ran into him on the steps of the State Department in Washington, and he stopped to chat. You asked amongst other things how his son Geoff, a foreign service career officer, was getting along and he replied Geoff was just fine and very happy in External Affairs.

"Geoff," said Lester Pearson with a grin as he turned to go, "is not an ambitious man."

You may remember.

Successful Drive

The Saanich Kiwanis Club would like to wish the people of Victoria a Happy New Year, and thank those who made our toy drive for the underprivileged children a success. Toys were delivered to approximately 275 families, plus toys for the Beecher Bay Indian children and Saanichton Indian children. — Stan Clark, Chairman of Toy Drive.

For Moratorium

It is my contention that most Canadians will admit that there are some weaknesses in our penal system. These same weaknesses cause crime and confusion in our society. More laws, especially more repressive laws, will not aid in lessening this confusion and crime, but be a factor in increasing them.

Canadian society is becoming increasingly complex and few social problems will be solved by simply passing a law. Most specifically I would like to refer to the desire by many to see capital punishment reinstated.

In the 18th Century crimes punishable by hanging in England reached 223. Cartloads of people were taken off for public hanging. Sadly, crime continued to increase. It was at the time when the police force was modified to a model of prevention of crime rather than to punishment of crime that the trend was reversed.

In the 20th Century I hope Canadians will not endorse 18th Century legislation to deal with present problems. The death sentence, and even life-term sentences amount to little more than legalized violence. Such measures will do very little to reduce illegal violence in Canada.

I believe that if our legal system is vicious the lawbreaker will be equally vicious. Abhorrence of a particular crime does not justify dealing with the criminal at the same level of action. The penal system must not only protect society but equally deal with lawbreakers humanely and practise rehabilitative measures. It is simply too easy to cast aside principles of humane treatment in the guise of public expediency. It becomes too easy also to disregard the right of each and every individual to become aware of his own humanity no matter what kind of action he has committed in the past.

Progressive countries, such as Norway, have not used capital punishment since the mid-1800s. Canada does not need barbaric legislation either. I hope that our members of Parliament will continue the moratorium on capital punishment. — R. Mellett, 916A Queens Ave.

Noses Out

Our prime minister is quoted as saying re Vietnam "Let's keep our noses out of it" — or words to that effect.

Is not that what the Pharisee said? "Men never do evil so happily and completely as when they do it from religious conviction": Pascal. — A. P. Rainey, 577 Transit.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of January 4, 1913:

New York: Thomas A. Edison gave the first demonstration of his most recent invention, the kinetophone, yesterday in his laboratory at West Orange, N.J. The kinetophone is a combination of moving picture machine and phonograph, with a synchronizing device that is a marvel of mechanical ingenuity. The machine will be put on the market in about 30 days.

"This will put the finest operas and best dramas within reach of the poorest man," said Mr. Edison. "For a nickel he will be able to see just as good performances as are now reserved for the rich man only."

Worst Is Over, Cuba Believes

By HERBERT L. MATTHEWS

(A retired New York Times correspondent, Matthews is writing a new book about Cuba.)

Both Cuba and the United States are going to have to change their policies if there is to be even the beginning of fruitful negotiations.

I spent three weeks in Cuba in September, during which I had talks with almost every leader from Fidel Castro down, and travelled from Pinar del Rio in the west to Oriente in the east. I would say that the least of the difficulties facing Washington is to get the Cubans to change their minds about talking with Henry Kissinger or whoever else might ultimately be sent to Havana. Judging from what has been said and written in Washington and New York (and picked up in London) there is little understanding of the formidable obstacles which stand between Cuba and the United States.

The economic situation has improved since 1970 and there are good reasons to believe, as President Osvaldos Dorticos put it to me, in "a slow, steady, uphill climb" during the coming years. Cuba has gone through 13 years of material hardships and just as it is beginning to let up Fidel Castro is not likely to be wooed and won by economic aid or dollar credits which are not at all essential to his revolution. No approach to him would make sense if it did not, as a pre-existing basis for negotiation, accept his revolution, including its Marxism-Leninism and the social transformation of Cuban life.

The Revolution and Fidel Castro's position in it seem stronger than ever. I had long talks with him and Raul Castro, his brother, other cabinet ministers, leaders of the Communist Party, the labor confederation, the Women's Federation and the Committees for the Defence of the Revolution. I have known these men and women for about 15 years and I have never seen them so relaxed. They believe that their worst trials are over.

No greater mistake can be made about the Cuban Revolution than to judge it in economic or material terms. Fidel Castro is not giving Cubans the consumer, goods and prosperity they would like, but he is giving them a great deal else they never had, such as honesty in government, excellent educational, medical and social services for every citizen, and almost full employment.

Cuba's entry into COMECON (the Communist bloc's economic union) last summer will change little. The island will always be "dependent" on the outer world because it lacks so many vital raw materials, but it is wrong to think glibly in terms of the Revolution simply having shifted Cuban dependence on the United States to the Soviet Union. Russia does not own an acre of Cuban land or a single mine or factory; it does not own or control Cuba's utilities and banking structure; it does not have any influence on the culture and way of life of Cubans. Moreover, it is a comfortable 6,000 miles away.

The whole structure of the Cuban economy has had to change from American machinery, goods, management and methods to the Russians, Japanese (the second largest traders), Spanish, British, French, Italians and Canadians. The United States can never again move into a vacuum, as it did after the 1898 war. Americans must start all over again.

Richard Nixon, more than any North American, is anathema to Fidel Castro, his associates and, one must suppose, the great majority of Cubans. Every time his name is printed in Granma, the official newspaper, it is with a swastika in place of the "x" in Nixon.

Almost certainly, the simple explanation of the Cuban approach is that Fidel Castro finally got utterly fed up with his country being made into a dumping ground for every criminal and crackpot who decided to hijack a plane. One need not yet read anything more into what has happened — but it may lead to more. Fidel Castro is nothing if not pragmatic, and he is never afraid to change his tactics. At 46 he has become more mature and more experienced.

"We will be friendly with those countries who want to be friendly with us, whatever their form of government," he said. However, he did not see how relations with the United States could change in present circumstances, and that he was not looking for change.

Press Freedom Fading

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ZURICH, Switzerland — Attacks on press freedom mounted throughout the world in 1972 and met with waning resistance, the International Press Institute (IPI) reports.

IPI warned in its annual review that "the true danger lies in the fact that a growing number of governments, parliamentary representatives, citizens and even some members of the press begin to accept that attacks on freedom of expression are legitimate and justifiable."

The review was written by IPI director Ernest Meyer. The institute has 1,700 members in 62 non-Communist countries.

The institute cited setbacks in press freedom in several countries, including the United States and Britain.

The institute said "silencing of the most courageous and frank press in Asia — that of the Philippines" — was the worst of many infringements that made 1972 "another year of lost battles" and posed "mortal dangers."

In the Philippines, President Ferdinand Marcos has shut down several newspapers during a period of martial law.

The report said that in the United States "the government in various guises is attempting to chip away at press freedom through the courts and by threats of court action.

"The intention, it seems, is to make the journalists timid in research for the facts and the public nervous when confronted by a reporter asking for them. But the foundation-stone of freedom of speech and the press edifice built on it remains almost unscathed."

The report added that in Britain "there are increasing signs from the political parties of a desire to control some news in some way."

The report also said that in Latin America the press can be regarded as "free only in Colombia, Costa Rica, Puerto Rico, Salvador and some 16 islands of the Antilles.

"One depressing and perhaps ominous sign is that, with rare exceptions, the press is bending to the pressures without strong protest, almost with resignation," the report said.

One major exception to the generally gloomy review was the comment on Japan.

The report said "the Japanese press is free, powerful and conscious of its responsibilities in the life of society."

"In every continent, an examination gives the general impression of a press retreat," the report said. "And on the day when the press resigns itself to losing this war — in a steadily shrinking free world — the only choice remaining to the press will be its freedom to choose under which regime it would prefer to be enslaved."

The report called on the press to "examine its own conscience to give its struggle adequate credibility . . . As a corollary to the privileges it enjoys in its role as servant of the public, there must be a sense of responsibility.

"In view of the mortal dangers which haunt the press . . . the interminable debates about the balance of power within the newspaper and the organization of internal politics tend to look like fiddling while Rome burns."

'Children's Lib' Can Free Us All

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

Like women's liberation, it automatically suggests its opposite. If women do free themselves from all the traditional constraints on their own development, they are bound in the course of events to generate a similar movement among men. They'll force us to it, if nothing else.

In the same way, children's liberation implies parents' liberation. Both ideas are one: They demand an end to the hierarchical family structure and in its place the setting-up of more communal and egalitarian family arrangements.

Human beings are capable of amazingly swift growth, but our culture and economy mitigate against it at every turn. In fact, what we have now is basically a "no-growth" situation.

Individuals are encouraged to achieve some kind of static economic and social balance as quickly as possible, and then stay the same as they are — for the rest of their lives. By such-and-such an age, you are all grown up and there's nothing more to it, goes the myth.

Moreover, you aren't in any way "grown-up" until then. But once you do get to that age, you're not supposed to change or grow any more.

Children's liberation implies the end to the myth that children are somehow a separate race from adults. There is no organic difference between the two. Easily, one may spot children who at five or six years of age are considerably more mature than individuals in their 20s, 30s, 40s or whatever.

Maturity is something more than a function of aging. It is a set of attitudes whose focus is willingness to assume responsibility for oneself. There are children who are far more responsible than many an adult.

There are, moreover, children who are more perceptive than adults, children who are more intelligent than adults, and even children who are more knowledgeable.

This is not to say that all children are smarter than adults, but it is to say that adults are not automatically smarter than children. The differences between adults and children are vastly exaggerated. Being "adult" is in large part a learned routine, an act, a game, nothing more.

The same must be said of much "childish" behavior. Children are quite capable of behaving maturely, but they are isolated from "mature" society and forced to act out such impotent roles that few of them ever even try to behave maturely. Why bother?

We all know adults who are positively childish. That tells us something, if we care to think about it. It tells us that we are not so superior to our children as we like to think and certainly not so "different. All of us have our "childish" urges, our "childish" moments, and our "childish" needs.

Simply, we are people, just as children are people. We just happen to have larger bodies, a larger accumulation of memories, references, prejudices, hangups, insights, information conditioned reflexes, experiences and sexual needs.

Emotionally, our differences aren't great. Perhaps the single greatest difference between the adult and the child is the role each must assume in society. No one expects the children to bring home the bacon any more (although they were ordinarily expected to from virtually the moment they could walk not many generations ago.)

★ ★ ★

The possibility of a rapport being established as soon as possible between the parent and child as equals is effectively cancelled out at every turn. The patriarchy refused to consider it. The matriarchy wouldn't tolerate it for a week.

The children are left to grow in splendid isolation because the adults have no time to enter the smaller people's worlds. And the doors to the adult world are sealed tighter than a drum.

Surely every grownup must be aware — however dimly — that children are mainly segregated from adults, often from their own parents. They live within distinct psychological ghettos.

Nowhere is this more evident than in the schools. The degree of segregation between school-age children and adults during the day could hardly be more complete. The difference at this point, of course is that the children are locked up in classrooms. They are prisoners.

AN ECOLOGIST LOOKS ON BRIGHT SIDE

There's Hope in the 'Golden Mean'

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

Amid genuine national concern that man is ruining the planet, environmentalist Rene Dubos told a hall full of scientists in Washington recently that mankind can maintain civilization, humanize the earth and, for that matter, substantially improve on nature itself.

If his B. Y. Morrison Memorial Lecture to the American Association for the Advancement of Science seemed strikingly optimistic, it was not because of ignorance, flippancy, or a denial that bad ecology caused civilizations to collapse in the past.

Isolated Enzymes

Dr. Dubos himself taught tropical medicine at Harvard Medical School for several years and is not one to make light of the environment and its hazards.

As a microbiologist he first isolated soil microbe enzymes that could destroy the protective coating of the pneumococcus that causes lobar pneumonia.

Except for two years at Harvard he has taught steadily at Rockefeller University since 1972, collecting 26 honorary degrees along the way and many awards including the first $50,000 Institute of Life prize. He keeps offices at the university in New York City as professor emeritus of environmental biomedicine.

Sitting with the sun flooding his room, he sported a mod shirt a shade or two deeper than his blue eyes. From time to time he touched his fringe of silver white hair and reflected on the world.

"I'd hate to be called an optimist," he said, "because that suggests I'm not aware of problems. It suggests panglossism, and I certainly don't believe in the nonsense that all is for the best of all possible worlds.

"But I do have a fantastic faith in the potentiality of man." With a few warnings, admittedly.

He has written several books including the Pulitzer Prize-winning "So Human an Animal" (1968) and most recently "A God Within," published last year.

Nature herself, he argued in his lecture, often fails to manage ecological crises well, even apart from cataclysms like volcanoes and earthquakes. Enormous deposits of oil, coal and peat result from nature's failure to recycle plant and animal bodies thoroughly.

"Paradoxically," he added in a statement calculated to stand some conservationists on their ears, "man helps somewhat in the completion of the cycle when he burns (these fuels) because he thereby makes the carbon and minerals once more available for plant growth."

The trouble, of course, is that they are put back in circulation so rapidly that they overload ecological systems.

Among other "clumsy solutions," of nature he cited repeated population crashes among lemmings, muskrats and rabbits, which are "unquestionably traumatic experiences for the animals . . . only the most starry-eyed panglossian optimist could claim that nature knows best how to achieve population control," he said.

It is natural for men and great apes to be wasteful, he said, and yet mankind has often transformed and helped nature. The region around Paris, where he was born in 1901, is a throroughly man-made landscape. It does not in the least resemble the gloomy forest that it was in Roman times, he said, and since it has no remarkable scenic features nobody would notice it except that it has developed its own special aura over the centuries as man has farmed it, groomed it and built on it.

It has also maintained its soil fertility for many centuries, he went on, adding that man himself brings out many possibilities of nature that would never be realized otherwise.

"Many types of lands can remain fertile for long periods of time without organic manure, provided they are continuously enriched with chemical fertilizers in amounts and compositions scientifically determined."

Asked by a reporter if this was not a virtual invitation for humans to ignore trace elements, soil structure, chemical buildup and soil bacteria as long as there was plenty of agricultural chemical fertilizer on hand, he said he would be horrified if anybody thought that. If a rosy French face or a civilized man can show shock, he did.

Extravagant Use

"We would certainly need to reintroduce humus," he said firmly, "but what I mean is that men have always used agricultural chemicals whether they called them that or not — for instance, marl or chalk on heavy clay lands. What is new is the fantastic use of chemical fertilizers laid on extravagantly, and about this I am indeed alarmed. By using excessive amounts one is damaging the very structure of the soil." His arms reached out for a summary:

"I think I can state it in a very general way: too often things not bad in themselves are pushed to absurd limits. The Greeks had the right approach — moderation; the Golden Mean."

Of land management he said: "Anyone knows that if we had used the same effort developing solar energy as we have on nuclear energy we could have gone much farther.

"The atom bomb, nuclear fission, was something of an accident, and once again we rushed ahead. We become one-track minds.

DUBOS
. . . keeps the faith

"Solar energy, after all, works; it's a question of developing it. My friends tell me geothermal energy is a possibility as well, though I am not so familiar with that.

"To survive, our civilization must again become a sun civilization, we must again become children of the sun. And all our societies have to learn to decentralize.

"I wish we'd learn to re-utilize the world. I realize solar batteries would not power great industries, but American home architecture could easily be adapted for solar energy. Our society will change, it will not stay just as we know it, no matter what we do."

In every case, he suggested, the introduction of new energy creates future shock, but this is a trend involved. "This is what being a man is.

"I have come to doubt whether one can think very far ahead. When we start something we start a process, and the consequences we never can predict. That is why if you plan in too great detail or too rigidly it's like the generals who are said to be always ready to fight the last war.

"Does this mean we should become passive? We are never really passive. But let me tell you what I think I see. We have gone as far as we want to go in the homogenization of the world. It leads to boredom. We've had enough."

Everywhere, he said, there are signs of "looking for the genus of the place" — the special quality unique to that place; thus people want the Pacific Northwest to look different and feel different from the south.

"That is a very powerful force in our society — the desire to achieve some kind of local identity. Modern Europe was created not so much because the Roman empire just dissolved, but because each region wanted to acquire its own identity and not just be part of the empire."

He concluded that man and his environment are like symbiotic lichens, composed of an algae and a bacterium. "Neither in itself has anything like the possibilities they have together. Thus from the union of two dull members sprout the lichen's brilliant crimson funnels, something totally unexpected from either member.

"Always I have this in mind: the environment and the biology of man." Not a divorce, but a union.

Solar energy there to be converted

Anyone for a Hanging?

By BEN METCALFE

(From a CBC radio broadcast)

When Parliament stages its free vote on the question as to whether we should retain capital punishment, one vital factor will be missing from the deliberations: a personal experience of the spectacle of execution — or judicial homicide as it is officially termed.

Few, if any, and I would gamble that none, of the present members of Parliament have ever witnessed a hanging.

In my work as a reporter, I have seen four men hanged in Canada, and I believe the experience is crucial to the formulation of any valid opinion on the subject.

One thing that a hanging teaches you is that capital punishment is not merely another social controversy that can be settled by civilization on the basis of abstractions and statistics alone.

It is ultimately an act of the human hand, yours and mine, and it can be understood only in those terms.

When we empower the state to kill, we must agree that we ourselves would be willing to carry out the execution.

That means that you — whoever you are, ladies and gentlemen — must not only pass the sentence of death, but also attend the condemned prisoner until his appointed hour, weigh him in, accompany him to the gallows you have built with your own hands, strap his legs together, place the noose around his neck, put that black bag over his head and spring the trap that drops your prisoner into eternity.

But you can't go home yet, ladies and gentlemen . . .

Now you must go downstairs where your prisoner is twirling and writhing at the end of your rope — unless, of course, you misjudged the drop, in which case the head would have been yanked from the body and both will now be lying on the floor.

But say your prisoner is still twirling. It will be about twenty minutes before you can cut down the corpse, because it is not yet a corpse, but very much alive.

Okay. Now you can cut it down, stuff the tongue back into the mouth, plug the body orifices with cotton batten, and hold your inquest into the manner of death.

When that's over, you may have doughnuts and coffee in the prison kitchen and then go home to your family.

If you are lucky, you may sleep well in the conviction that you have justly rid the world of another evil.

But I don't think you would be that lucky.

The odds are that you will lie awake thinking, not so much of the evil you have just sent out of your world, but more about the evil you have just let into it.

Ottawa Sets Clean Air Standards

OTTAWA (CP) — National air quality objectives to be used as a standard for the regulation of four major air pollutants were announced today by Environment Minister Jack Davis.

The federal clean air act will eventually specify three different levels for the regulation of air pollutants—"desirable," "acceptable" and "tolerable."

The announcement defines only the first two categories in terms of sulphur dioxide, particulate matter, carbon monoxide and total oxidants.

The third level will be defined later. Similar levels are planned for pollutant hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides.

The maximum acceptable level is defined as the level above which soil, water, vegetation, animals and people are endangered. When that level is exceeded a regulatory agency will be expected to act.

The maximum desirable level is being set by the federal government as a future target. At this level there would be no adverse biological effect from pollutants.

The tolerable level to be defined later will mark the onset of imminent danger from a pollutant.

The maximum levels are set out in terms of the volume of pollutant per volume of air, measured in one-hour to one-year periods.

The federal levels are generally lower than existing U.S. and Ontario levels.

The maximum acceptable level for sulphur dioxide is 60 micrograms per cubic metre as averaged over one year, 300 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum 24 hour concentration and 900 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum one-hour concentration.

The maximum desirable level for sulphur dioxide is 30 micrograms per cubic metre as averaged over one year, 150 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum 24-hour concentration and 450 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum one-hour concentration.

The maximum acceptable level for particulate matter is 70 micrograms per cubic metre as an annual average, 120 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum 24-hour concentration.

The carbon monoxide maximum acceptable level is 15 milligrams per cubic metre as a maximum eight-hour concentration and 35 milligrams per cubic metre as a maximum one-hour concentration.

The carbon monoxide desirable level is six milligrams per cubic metre as a maximum eight-hour concentration and 15 milligrams per cubic metre as a maximum one-hour concentration.

The total oxidant maximum acceptable level is 30 micrograms per cubic metre averaged over a year, 50 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum 24-hour concentration, 160 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum one-hour concentration.

The total oxidant maximum desirable level is 30 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum 24-hour concentration and 100 micrograms per cubic metre as a maximum one-hour concentration.

Washington Police Tied to Payoff Deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Twelve Washington police officers, including the chief of the department's community relations division and the heads of two district vice squads, were relieved of duty as the result of a year-long probe of gambling payoffs.

Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson, in a brief announcement, said the 12 would face departmental charges later. A U.S. grand jury reportedly is preparing criminal indictments to be filed against some police officers by the end of the month.

The Washington Post reported today that a former police officer, under indictment for conspiring to make false arrests, had provided much of the evidence for the action through tape recordings. The former officer, Harold F. Crook, was the head of the third district vice quad.

The Post quoted an unidentifed assistant to Wilson as saying "it is the darkest hour for the police department since Jerry has been chief."

Wilson was not available for comment.

A year ago Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., charged there was widespread corruption in the Washington police department and demanded an investigation.

He withdrew the request after a shakeup occurred in the department resulting in the suspension of six officers and Wilson assured that the charges would be vigorously investigated within the department.

A short time later eight officers, including the six who had been suspended, were indicted for allegedly conspiring to make false arrests.

Crook was alleged to have been the ringleader of the conspiracy. He was promised immunity if he assisted in the investigation but a judge later refused to dismiss the charges against him and his case is still pending.

National Union Makes Trail Bid

The breakaway Canadian Workers Union today applied to the Labor Relations Board for the right to represent about 3,500 Cominco workers in the East Kootenay district.

And the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers (CAIMAW) filed an application for certification at Bethlehem Copper's mine at Ashcroft, employing about 300 men.

In effect, both applications seek the ouster of giant international unions — the United Steelworkers at Cominco, and the International Operating Engineers and the Laborers' International Union at Ashcroft.

The Labor Relations Board is expected to make routine investigation on the applications, such as checking membership cards, before deciding whether to order a vote at the various operations.

If the international unions are defeated, the Canadian independents would gain about 4,000 members in addition to the 1,800 Alcan workers they won over last fall.

Doug Swanson, CWU Trail local president, said his application covers Cominco's Trail smelter, the Kimberley mine as well as the recently-reopened Hudson's Bay mine at Salmo, expected to employ about 200 men this spring.

Swanson said the CWU has signed up about 1,700 men in Trail and 500 at Kimberley, or roughly 65 per cent of the company's mining and production workers in the East Kootenays.

CAIMAW spokesman George Brown said his union had signed up nearly 70 per cent of the Bethlehem Copper miners, "and we're pretty confident we will win on a vote."

Pilot's City Links Recalled

The pilot of the Pacific Western Airlines Boeing 707 that crashed in a blizzard while approaching Edmonton International Airport Tuesday was born and educated in Victoria.

His niece, Mrs. Joyce Chem, says Capt. Arthur Jung was educated at North Ward elementary school and Victoria high school.

His brother, Douglas Jung, a Vancouver lawyer and Conservative MP for Vancouver Centre from 1957 to 1963, said Arthur, 51, had been making long-range plans for his retirement in nine years' time.

"He did what he liked doing, and that was flying."

Jung is reported to have been PWA's most experienced pilot, with more than six years' experience on 707s alone.

He flew Lancaster bombers with the Royal Canadian Air Force during the Second World War.

Five crew members died in Tuesday's crash when the jet, carrying a shipment of Holstein cattle from Toronto to Seoul, Korea, smashed into a gravel pit two miles short of the Edmonton runway.

Jung was the son of the late Jung Yick Ching of Victoria. A third brother, Dr. Ross Jung, lives in Connecticut. He is also survived by his wife, Vivian; their daughter and his mother.

'Sniper Helper Shot in Back

From AP-REUTER

BELFAST (CP) — British troops came under fire in a Roman Catholic district of Belfast, but the only casualty was a householder who kept turning on lights to aid the snipers.

The army said the man turned on an outside light Wednesday night as the soldiers were fired at in the Ardoyne area. A soldier smashed the light with his rifle butt, a spokesman said, but "the man went back into the house, leaving his door open and an inside light on."

"The security forces were fired on again, and the man was hit in the back," an army spokesman said. "The soldiers did not fire at all."

Police said the man's condition was serious.

Meanwhile, three Protestants from East Belfast appeared in court Wednesday on charges of killing three Catholics last summer. They were the first to be taken before a court on such charges since the British government set up a special army-police task force to track down the murder squads that have taken 82 Catholic and 40 Protestant lives.

Eight other men will appear in court in the next few weeks on similar charges.

Prime Minister Jack Lynch of the Republic of Ireland leaves today for the United States, where he will attempt to dissuade Americans from privately granting financial aid to outlawed republican guerrillas.

The official reason for Lynch's nine-day trip is to promote U.S. investment in the Irish republic.

The Irish leader is scheduled to meet President Nixon Friday.

But most observers believe that Lynch will also ask Nixon to impose fresh controls on the flow of private money for organizations backing the banned Irish Republican Army, whose guerrilla activities have recently spread from Northern Ireland to the republic.

PEDESTRIANS MAY GET A BREAK

VANCOUVER (CP) — A number of changes and new programs were outlined by Mayor Art Phillips Wednesday as he promised "strong and decisive leadership after listening to and consulting with citizens," in a speech following his inauguration as Vancouver's 32nd mayor.

Specific plans included in the speech were:

—New zoning laws to make the downtown area into what Phillips termed a more "pedestrian-oriented" place;

—Re-organization of the city welfare department;

—Improvement of housing in the skid road area;

—Opening to the public of the city waterfront between Stanley Park and Main Street; and

'Hoax Believers Not So Crazy'

LONDON (Reuter) — The New Scientist, a leading British science journal, says that people who believe the Apollo man-on-the-moon program was a giant hoax may not be so crazy after all.

"The U.S. is already perpetrating some of the most massive hoaxes in history," it says in an editorial entitled Fantasy in Nixon's America.

"With TV coverage comparable to that given the space program, the U.S. has been shown to be withdrawing troops from Vietnam. How many TV viewers realize that this whole production is being staged for their benefit, and that the number of U.S. military personnel in Southeast Asia did not change during 1972?

"And then there was the biggest hoax of all, which involved not only the media but the North Vietnamese government itself, and was aimed at convincing U.S. voters that a peace treaty was about to be signed.

"Any government that would hoax not only its own people but also a foreign government to win an election would surely not stop at fabricating an entire space program. Perhaps the doubters are not so crazy."

$ Reserves Edge Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's international monetary reserves edged upward in December, totalling $6,049.3 million compared with $6,046.5 million the previous month, reports Statistics Canada.

A decrease in the amount of United States dollar holdings was offset by increases in holdings of other foreign currencies and in the reserve on tap in the International Monetary Fund.

U.S. dollar holdings dipped to $4,355 million from $4,357.3 million in November. Holdings of other foreign currencies rose to $12.6 million from $10 million.

The reserve position in the international fund rose to $342.9 million from $339.9 million. The reserve figure is the amount Canada can draw from the fund without question.

TWA

Trans World Airlines had a $47.5-million preliminary net profit for the first 11 months of 1972, a $40.1-million improvement over the same period of 1971, Charles C. Tillinghast, board chairman, reported.

The chairman added: "We continue to earn well below the level established by the Civil Aeronautics Board as a reasonable return on investment."

Outlook on Bonds Favorable

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The outlook for bond prices in 1973 is generally favorable, although there is underlying concern about a possible surge in inflation.

Two major factors are federal government spending policies — which will become evident with the budget — and the direction of interest rates.

Minority governments tend to move heavily into deficit spending, a factor which could lead to strong inflationary pressures. The government's sale of savings bonds, however, was highly successful and fiscal balances are otherwise in good order.

At present there appears to be a smaller demand for loans, which may reduce the pressure on interest rates. Some slacking in the demand for new houses may hold the mortgage interest rate around 9 per cent during 1973.

Meanwhile, the McLeod, Young, Weir monthly index of 40 bonds showed a slight dip for December to an average yield of 8.11 per cent from 8.15 per cent in November. In December, 1971, the average yield was 8.05 per cent.

Value index for the 40 bonds was 234.20 at year's end, up from 231.77 a month ago and 216.68 a year ago. Price index stood at 58.12 compared with 57.91 a month ago and 58.40 a year ago.

The index of 10 provincial government bonds at the end of December stood at an average yield of 7.91 per cent compared with 7.93 per cent a month ago and 7.75 per cent a year ago.

Yield of 10 municipal bonds was 8.18 per cent compared with 8.15 per cent in November and 7.85 in December, 1971.

Yield of 10 public utilities was 8.18 per cent compared with 8.25 per cent a month ago and 8.35 per cent a year ago.

Yield of 10 industrial bonds was 8.15 per cent compared with 8.25 per cent a month ago and 8.24 per cent a year ago.

Government of Canada 5 per cent bonds dated Oct. 1, 1973, had a yield of 4.75 per cent, compared with 4.87 per cent in November and 4.60 per cent in December, 1971.

Government of Canada 4.5 per cent bonds dated Sept. 1, 1983, had a yield of 6.73 per cent compared with 6.60 per cent a month ago and 6.08 per cent a year ago.

Government of Canada 5.75 per cent bonds dated Sept. 1, 1992, had a yield of 7.24 per cent compared with 7.30 per cent a month ago and 6.65 per cent a year ago.

Posties Don't Want Pact Vote

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of more than 6,000 letter carriers have asked their national negotiating committee to stop scheduled voting on a national contract.

Representatives of 30 locals met in Toronto Wednesday and sent a telegram to Ottawa requesting the vote on conciliation board recommendations be halted, because the government has not indicated whether it will accept it.

The meeting, called by the Montreal local, was attended by representatives from across the country.

Voting on the conciliation board recommendations began Wednesday in Windsor and Toronto, but most centres will vote on the contract Jan. 7. The proposed contract is for a 65-cent-an-hour pay increase, plus $400 in retroactive pay over a 33-month contract.

Guy Morrissette, president of Montreal Local 10, said the meeting was called because of "a massive confusion across the country."

Morrissette said the telegram asked the national negotiators to stop the vote by noon Friday.

The group also agreed that if the vote could not be stopped, they would go on the record as urging rejection of the conciliation report, said Morrissette.

The proposed contract is for Canada's 30,000 post office employees.

Bill MacDonald, representative of Local 15 in Edmonton, said the letter carriers were opposed to the vote because the treasury board had not indicated any approval of the conciliation report.

"We want to be able to vote on a concrete offer," said MacDonald.

Both MacDonald and Morrissette said the wording of the ballot was also confusing, so that a "yes" vote means acceptance of the negotiators' rejection and "no" means acceptance of the board's report.

MacDonald said the letter carriers would like to see the report rejected. Negotiators then could return to the bargaining table armed with a strike vote.

$33,000 SPENT ON PARKLAND

Property priced at $33,000 has been bought by Saanich for additions to the municipal parks system.

Purchase of about half an acre of former Vantreight land containing old farm buildings will help round out the perimeter of Lambrick Park on Tyndall Avenue. Cost was $16,000.

Parks administrator Bert Richman said land at the north end of Lambrick Park had been transferred to school authorities and when a new school is completed the remaining sports fields would be included in the park for a total area of about 40 acres.

A new neighborhood park will be built on two lots on Seymour between Cloverdale and Saanich, near former municipal land earmarked for park use. The property, purchased for $17,000, contains a small cottage which will be removed shortly as workmen install drainage and prepare the site under local initiatives incentive. Planting and other surface work likely will be in the 1974 parks program.

Munro Backs Nemetz

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Labor Minister John Munro has urged British Columbia maritime employers and longshoremen to set aside their differences and accept the Nemetz settlement report.

The minister made the appeal in a telegram to Don Garcia, Canadian-area president of International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. The union leader had asked for an extension of the West Coast Ports Operations Act from Jan. 2 to Jan. 9 to allow for intensive negotiations with the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association, using the settlement report by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz as the basis for a new contract.

The union made clear it wished to carry on the guarantee of full retroactivity provided in the act for the addional week of negotiations.

The act expired Dec. 31 after a three-month period during which longshoremen and employers were ordered to keep working. Nemetz was called in as mediator when the employers and union negotiators could not settle major difficulties over handling containers, computer dispatch of dock workers, and jurisdictional issues.

In his reply, Munro said he does not have the authority to extend the terms of the special act since it was passed by Parliament.

Instead he urged "both parties to set aside any differences they may have and accept the recommendations made by Nemetz and thereby bring an end to this long-standing dispute."

Nemetz recommended a $1.05-an-hour wage increase on the $5.03 base rate over a 29-month period and joint committee studies of issues still in dispute.

City Unions Condemn U.S. Tactics

Victoria Labor Council delegates voted Wednesday night to "express horror and shock" at the recent bombing by United States airplanes of North Viet Nam.

Council secretary Larry Ryan said Hitler's policy against Poland in the Second World War was a "scorched earth" one and the bombing in North Viet Nam "is more devastating."

However, Larry Tickner of the carpenters union said it is not enough to protest.

"We must understand why these things occur. The U.S. needs oil and offshore oil in Viet Nam offers future oil reserves to fuel her industrial machine. They also need the southeast Asian market, and the tin and tungsten from Cambodia."

Don Douglas of the shipwrights union took a different view. He said there are two sides to the dispute, and protest should also be made to China and the Soviet Union and North Viet Nam to go back to the bargaining table.

Softball: To Herb Bate, Why Waste the Winter?

It may not seem like the appropriate time of the year to talk softball, but to Herb Bate, the 1973 season already is four months old.

A contractor by profession, Herb also is the man behind the pen, and behind Bates softball (or fastball, if you prefer) team, the best senior men's team in B.C. for the past two years.

And if that's a fine record of accomplishment, it still is not quite good enough. Frankly, Herb wants the Canadian title, and this season will do nicely to get it. Thus his peculiar time table.

"I started to think about next year, last September," Herb disclosed at a holiday soiree called for the express purpose of introducing the media to a new member of the organization, Les Barber from Edmonton.

Les is No. 2 in this year's list of quality imports. No. 1, was pitcher Stan Kern, once a teammate of Barber's, and it is Bate's hope that perhaps the addition of this talent may make the playoff trail a trifle easier to tread.

Kern is generally ranked as the second best pitcher in Canada. Barber last year hit .315 in the fast Edmonton League and was voted the most valuable player on the Playboy's team. A versatile performer, he has also caught Kern, and this is one important reason he is here.

Which also means that there will be little friendship exhibited by coach Joe Patterson when it comes to picking the starters for Bates this spring. The Seventh coach in Bates' five-year history, Patterson is aware of his importance.

No 'Great Social Club' Wanted

"If we stood pat, socially it would be a great club," said Patterson. "But that isn't the object. We want a Canadian championship, and if I have to pat someone from last year on the back, and say 'sorry you can't make the team,' I will."

Besides, Bates players feel they gave good value for their efforts last season. Only Seattle in the Northwest League proved their master and now, with Kern and Barber on the squad, they feel confident they can match the Americans.

Besides, Bates have another motive. The U.S. nationals are scheduled for Seattle this year, and with several top teams due in the northwest, Bates would love to host an international tournament as a preview to the U.S. nationals. It is felt that several of the U.S. teams would be only too pleased to engage in warm-up competition. And if, by then, Bates could happen to be Canadian champs, and the world champion Toronto team of last year be numbered among their victims . . . well, this could be the chance of a lifetime to be as close to No. 1 as it's possible to get.

But that is all in the future book. Now the international league which proved to be such a success last season from a competitive viewpoint, is in the planning stage again. And there could be an increase to eight teams if present plans materialize. Yakima and Everett want in, and a second team from Seattle is a distinct possibility. All of which could mean a 42-game schedule.

Intentional Walk—An Experiment

In addition, Bates are pledged to introduce a suggestion that the throwing of the four balls for an intentional base on balls be waived. If an intentional walk is to be granted, the catcher will notify the umpire, who will award the batter first base. Play will be dead.

Feeling among the players isn't unanimous on this innovation. Some think it would take an intangible something away from the game . . . after all there always is the possibility of a wild pitch if the pitcher is made to throw and actually the time spent, in softball, on walking a man, isn't as long, in time, as in baseball. . . .

. . . And there may be second thoughts . . .

However, John Oster, the team business manager, said the move was definite and there had been favorable reaction from other clubs. In stressing that the move was strictly in the form of an experiment, he also produced statistics to back his contention that throwing of the four balls was a needless exercise.

"In 92 intentional walks last year, there was not one wild pitch," he declared. "Besides it will speed up the game."

So there it is — a man (make that men) at work in the winter, planning for the summer, with hopefully a Canadian championship to follow in September. That's when Herb will have to start thinking about '74.

Rangers' Giacomin Enjoys Difference

By UP International

For the first part of the National Hockey League season, Eddie Giacomin couldn't find a cage big enough in which to hide. Now, the very same cage is as small as he can be to his enemies.

The cage in question is the goal that Giacomin tends for the New York Rangers. In his first four starts this season, the former all-star netminder allowed 19 goals, a disastrous-enough showing to earn him a place on the bench for the longest stretch of his NHL career. Today, he stands as the all-time Ranger shutout leader after allowing only one score in his last three games.

The difference?

"I don't really think I'm doing anything different," Giacomin said Wednesday night after he made club history by whitewashing the Los Angeles Kings, 3-0. "I practice the same, I play the same. The only thing different is I'm stopping the puck."

The shutout was the second in three games for Giacomin and his 41st in eight years with New York. Davey Kerr was the former Ranger record-holder with 40 shutouts, but Giacomin still is a long way behind the 103 career shutouts of the late Terry Sawchuck.

"It's got to be a great honor being the top goalie in Ranger history in regard to shutouts," said Giacomin, who played the game despite a severe cold.

On the other side of the country, the California Golden Seals made news by running up the highest goal total of their history by trouncing the Vancouver Canucks 11-3. Pete Laframboise, a rookie left wing, led the rout with four goals.

Montreal Canadiens moved into a first-place tie with idle Boston for first place in the east division by clubbing the Toronto Maple Leafs, 8-4, and the west division race also tightened as the Pittsburgh Penguins knocked off the pacesetting Chicago Black Hawks 5-3. In other games, Buffalo Sabres beat the New York Islanders 4-1 and Philadelphia Flyers tripped Atlanta Flames 3-1.

The Rangers took advantage of the only two power-play situations they had to score their first two goals with defenseman Ab Demarco connecting in the first period and Vic Hadfield in the third. Glen Sather collected the final goal by shooting into an empty net with 17 seconds to play as New York climbed to within four points of first place in the East.

Ivan Boldirev and Craig Patrick scored two goals each for California, which had won only six of its previous 38 games this season. It was the first success in four tries for the Seals against Vancouver. Lamframboise's outburst lifted his season total to 10 goals.

Darryl Sittler scored the first two goals of the game for Toronto, but Jacques Lemaire scored on a 90-foot shot for his 30th goal of the season to start Montreal on the way to its rout. Yvan Cournoyer scored his 23rd and 24th goals for Montreal.

"We haven't had a big game like this for a long time," said Montreal's Frank Mahovlich, who had a goal and two assists. "We've been playing very tight for the last few weeks and we're not playing well. It's good we had this big night."

Eddie Shack scored two goals to help Pittsburgh to its first victory on Chicago ice since Nov. 28, 1968. It was the second loss in the last three games for the Black Hawks, whose lead over runnerup Minnesota remained at four points.

Rene Robert scored one goal and assisted on two others to lift Buffalo to its 11th consecutive home-ice victory.

It's Time To Move For Hadl

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "It's just time to move on and play for a different club," says John Hadl after 11 seasons as quarterback of San Diego Chargers.

An attempt is being made to trade him head coach Harland Svare of the National Football League club said Wednesday, adding, "but you just can't give away a player like John Hadl."

Svare called in Phil Bengtson, his director of player talent, and fired him Tuesday. That made Tom Denman the Chargers' equipment manager who also was released, comment: "I just wonder who's going to be next?

Svare, in his first year of a five-year contract saw his club wind up last in the Western Division of the American Football Conference.

Hadl, one of pro football's most durable quarterbacks, surprised his team-mates with word that he and club officials had "mutually" decided to trade him. In 1972, Hadl was named man of the year in the National Football League.

Dale in Second

SEBRING, Fla. — Victoria champion Dale Shaw, who burst into international prominence last year by sharing the U.S. national team title with Marilyn Palmer of Kamloops, is making another bid for golf glory.

A member of Glen Meadows club in Sidney, Miss Shaw shared second place, three strokes behind the leader, in the 17th annual Harder Hall women's invitational tournament.

Jane Booth, former U.S. women's champion, grabbed the lead Wednesday with a two-under-par 71. Miss Shaw, Alice Dye of Delray Beach, Fla., and nationally-ranked Barbara McIntyre of Colorado Springs shared second place with one-over 74s.

The 54-hole tournament winds up Friday.

This marks the third straight season that Miss Shaw, who took up golf less than six years ago, is campaigning on the Florida winter circuit.

Taxpayers Hit By TV Deal Eagleson Says

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson, man about sport, said Wednesday he intends "if possible" to have the matter of the sale of the United States television rights for the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal raised in the House of Commons.

The rights were sold Wednesday to the ABC television network for $25 million and a New York agent who engineered the deal will be paid $325,000.

Should the agent, Marvin Josephson of New York who is president of the International Famous Agency, sell the world rights for another $25 million he will get an additional $375,000.

Eagleson said:

"We had offered to buy these rights through Bobby Orr Enterprises. . . . The transaction with the American Broadcasting Company seems a little bit suspicious to me.

"It was obviously a private arrangement, and if that wasn't bad enough in itself, the Games committee has compounded the mistake by paying a needless commission to an American promoter."

The Games rights would have been sold without a promoter, said Eagleson who is secretary of Bobby Orr Enterprises, executive director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, a lawyer, and a representative of numerous NHL players.

He said that since Canadian taxpayers will have to bear the cost of staging the Olympics "I hate to see $700,000 given away so easily and so needlessly to an American promoter."

AL EAGLESON
. . . appeals to government

Awarding of the contract, which must yet be approved by the International Olympic Committee, has caused some controversy — the National Broadcasting Co. said the bidding was closed and it didn't have a chance at the rights.

Eagleson said everyone should have a chance to bid.

"Orr Enterprises was prepared to operate a non-profit basis. We felt that we could work with the networks and hire the best experts available, as we did in the Canada-Soviet hockey series, to make sure the Games reflect the proper Canadian image and turn back as much money as possible to save the taxpayers' dollar.

"It seems we have been cut off before we could begin. . . .

"I'm hoping the federal government will look into the whole matter. I've advised Marc LaLonde, minister of health and welfare, of our bid through Orr Enterprises and I'm sure members of the House will want to have the matter fully investigated."

Eagleson's "help-the-the-taxpayer" theme may have been helped with another report in Toronto which declared the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has asked the federal government, for $40 million to set up an international broadcasting system for the games.

The Toronto Sun quoted Gordon Craig, planning and production director of CBC-TV Sports, as saying that there is not enough TV equipment in Canada to handle the games and "we came to the conclusion that between renting and purchasing new equipment we would need approximately $40 million."

The newspaper also quotes Craig as saying the CBC has studied two possibilities — bidding for exclusive rights, other than United States rights which have been obtained by ABC, or acting jointly with the independent CTV Network.

Roger Rousseau, commissioner-general of the summer Olympics, announced the sale of the TV rights to ABC at a sometimes-turbulent, 90-minute news conference in Montreal.

Shortly after Rousseau's announcement was made, a spokesman for the rival National Broadcasting Co. in New York criticized the ABC award.

"NBC continues to believe that the procedure used to award American television rights to the 1976 Olympic games are contrary to the best interests of the people of Canada, the American TV audience and the Games themselves."

Four Cities Bidding

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of four cities were making pitches to the United States Olympic Committee today to become the alternate to Denver as the site of the 1976 Winter Games.

Lake Placid, N.Y., Salt Lake City and two Lake Tahoe resort areas decided to bid after residents of the Colorado capital rejected the extravaganza in a referendum.

An IOC executive committee meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, next month will decide where the games will be held.

The U.S. government had allocated about $15 million for construction of facilities in Denver, but it was not known whether the funds could be diverted to another city if it were selected.

★ ★ ★

The Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic Committee now is busy preparing to bid for the 1976 games.

Under the plan, skating events would be held in Vancouver and ski-jumping events at Grouse Mountain in North Vancouver. Regular skiing would be held at Whistler Mountain, 60 miles north of Vancouver.

Sid Young, president of the committee, said costs can be kept under $20 million.

No TV Blackout Due to Sellout

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Super Bowl will be televised locally for the first time in its seven-year history because all 90,182 tickets, worth, $1,352,720 have been sold for the National Football League championship game Jan. 14.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the NFL announced Wednesday that all the $15 tickets have been sold in advance. He said last October that the 75-mile TV blackout would be lifted if the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum was sold out 10 days in advance.

The Super Bowl, matching Miami Dolphins against Washington Redskins, will be televised by the National Broadcasting Co. under a $2.75 million contract. NBC alternates televising the game with the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Steeler, Redskin Stars Brightest

STARTING at quarterback for Miami Dolphins in Super Bowl game Jan. 14 for National Football League championship will be Bob Griese. Sidelined in Dolphins' fifth game of season when he broke leg, Griese gave way to No. 2 quarterback Earl Morrall until last weekend when Griese took command in second half of 21-17 victory over Pittsburgh Steelers in playoff.

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Brown of Washington Redskins and Mean Joe Greene of Pittsburgh Steelers were named today The Associated Press players of the year in the National Football League.

Brown, the running back who rolled up 1,216 yards to lead the National Conference and helped carry the Redskins to the NFC championship, amassed 41 of the 67 votes for NFL offensive player of the year cast by a nationwide panel of pro football writers.

Greene, the tackle who anchored the Steelers' line, garnered 32 of the 67 votes cast to easily take NFL defensive player-of-the-year honors.

There was a three-way tie for runner-up in the offensive category as O. J. Simpson of Buffalo Bills and Earl Morrall and Larry Csonka of Miami Dolphins received five votes apiece.

Simpson provided the Bills with most of their offence and, surpassing the injured Brown in the regular season's final game, won the league rushing title with 1,251 yards.

Morrall replaced injured quarterback Bob Griese in the fifth game of the season and proceeded to direct the Dolphins the rest of the way to a perfect 14-0 season and to the American Conference East championship. Csonka was the mainstay of Miami's record-setting ground attack as he bulled for 1,117 yards, second only to Simpson in the AFC.

Other vote-getters for the offensive player award were Pittsburgh rookie running back Franco Harris with four, Oakland Raiders' wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff with three and Miami guard Larry Little and New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath with two apiece.

Closest to Greene's 37 votes in the defensive balloting were linebackers Nick Buoniconti of Miami with eight and Chris Hanburger of Washington with seven, followed by defensive tackles Bob Lilly of Dallas Cowboys with four and Merlin Olsen of Los Angeles Rams with three.

Others receiving votes were Tommy Hart and Dave Wilcox of San Francisco '49ers and Willie Lanier of Kansas City Chiefs with two apiece. Jim Carter and Ken Ellis of Green Bay Packers, Roy Winston of Minnesota Vikings, Jack Pardee of Washington, Walter Johnson of Cleveland Browns, Jack Tatum of Oakland and Mel Renfro of Dallas, each with one vote.

Only a minor leg injury — which forced coach George Allen to bench Brown for the final two games of the season in preparation for the playoffs — kept Brown from winning the NFL rushing title.

Greene, who led a defence that helped bring Pittsburgh its first divisional title — the American Conference Central crown — in 40 years, literally overwhelmed opposition ball-carriers.

He finished the season with 42 unassisted tackles, 34 assists, six pass blocks, 11 quarterback sacks and a fumble recovery.

An example of Greene's talent came in the AFC's first-round playoff, in which Pittsburgh beat Oakland. The Raiders called 40 rushing plays — with only four of them going toward Greene's side of the line.

Czechs Lock Up Honors in Ontario

By The Canadian Press

Personal pride will be all that's at stake tonight when Prague Selects of Czechoslovakia play Kingston Aces.

The Selects clinched the title Wednesday night in the six-team Ontario international hockey tournament with a 6-1 victory over Timra of Sweden.

The victory, before 2,138 fans in Kitchener, was the fourth in a row for the Czechs. Tonight's game against Kingston of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series will be the final one in the tournament for the Czechs.

A loss for Prague would, at worst, leave it tied for top with Galt Hornets and Moscow Dynamos. However, the Czechs still would be declared tournament winner since they have beaten both Galt and Moscow in the series.

In Wednesday night's only other action, Moscow scored the first six goals and then coasted to an 8-5 win over Orillia Terriers in an exhibition game which did not count in tournament standings.

The Prague-at-Kingston game is the only one scheduled tonight. Friday, Sweden is at Owen Sound against the Downtowners and, in an exhibition game, Moscow plays Belleville Quintes at Belleville.

Scoring for Prague Wednesday were Vladimir Martinec, Richard Farda, Vaclav Nedomansky, Julius Haas, Bob Stastny and George Novak. Ake Soderberg scored for the Swedes.

Picking up two goals each for Moscow were Mikhail Alexeenko, Vyacheslav Solodukin and Yuri Chichurin. Mikhail Titov and Evgeni Kotlov had one each.

Orillia goals went to Gary Marsh, Carrie Vaughan, Gary Milroy, Doug Dunnville and Ron Young.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Russian national hockey team scored its third victory in a row over a Western Hockey League team, Wednesday night, stopping the San Diego Gulls, 8-2.

Forwards Viacheslav Anisin and Alexsandr Bodunov paced the Russians, newly crowned World Cup champions, with a pair of goals each. The Russians last month defeated Seattle 9-4 and Phoenix 5-4 in other exhibitions against WHL foes.

GAEVLE, Sweden (AP) — Barrie Flyers were thumped 9-1 by Swedish champions Brynaes in a Star Cup hockey game Wednesday night.

Barrie trailed 5-0 after the first period and 7-1 after two. John MacMillan scored the lone goal for the Ontario club.

One-Hour Drive Provides Bonanza for Steelheaders

The greatest selection of streams on the east coast of Vancouver Island for the winter steelheader lies along a 50-mile stretch of the Island Highway from Parksville to Courtenay. Variety is the byword.

A one-hour drive will take you across two major rivers and several streams, all accessable from the highway and many with side roads to provide additional access upstream.

Travelling north through this angler's Mecca, Englishman's River crosses the highway on the southern outskirts of Parksville. Runs enter the river early in December and continue to late April. There also is a small run of summer steelhead in the upper canyon area.

Access to the Englishman's is from Kay Road off the Island Highway. Fly, float or drift fishing are all good.

Two miles north of Parksville, the highway crosses French Creek, a good producer with winter runs from late December to March. Float fishing is recommended. Access is from the highway bridge, but urban development is beginning to limit fishing on this stream.

★ ★ ★

Just north of Qualicum Beach, the angler crosses the first of the Qualicum rivers, the Little Qualicum. This is a high quality angling stream allowing fly, float and drift fishing.

Steelhead enter early in December and continue well into May. A limited run of summer fish is available early in the fall. Upstream access is available from the highway bridge, Texada Road one-half mile north, and from Montrose Road on the Alberni Highway.

Five miles further along the highway is the Big Qualicum, with controlled flow which guarantees fishing regardless of weather.

Steelhead enter early in December but masses of spawning chum salmon make the river unfishable until the Christmas holidays. The run peaks late in February, but some steelhead are caught well into May.

Access is from the fisheries road paralleling the river (hiking only) or from Horne Lake Road. For best results, try drift fishing in the lower section of the river and float fishing in the upper reaches.

★ ★ ★

Between the Big Qualicum and the Courtenay River lie Nile, Cook, Rosewall, Cougar and Washer creeks and the Trent and Tsable rivers. These are float fishing streams only.

Water conditions are important and the angler must fish these streams just as they are rising from heavy rains or runoff, or when they are receding. Steelhead run from December to April.

Streams feeding the Courtenay River provide excellent fly, float and drift fishing from December to June.

The Browns River, accessable from Forbidden Plateau Road, has a very late run of winter steelhead in May.

The Tsolum, accessable from Plateau and Headquarters roads, is best from December to April. A summer or fall run enters the Puntledge and peaks late in October. The Puntledge, accessable from Condensory Road, Centennial Park or Power House Road in Courtenay, is good from October to June.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: Stretch for distance

Russians Prefer To Face the Best

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Soviet Union hockey team, dominating the World Cup tournament for a second straight year, wants to take on the National Hockey League again.

Vsevolod Bobrov, the Soviet coach, indicated after the Russians smashed a group of U.S. college players 13-3 Tuesday night he would rather play an all-star group from the NHL than separate teams.

The Soviet Union, 3-0 in the round-robin World Cup, gave the NHL all-stars a tough battle last summer in an eight-game series, winning three and tying one.

"We put together an all-star team for the series so we would prefer to play an NHL all-star team rather than face teams like Montreal, Boston or the New York Rangers," said Bobrov.

Hot Clippers Win Another

Times News Services

Gord Dumont and Dave Martens each banged in two goals Wednesday as Nanaimo Clippers defeated Vancouver Villas 7-2 to run their undefeated B.C. Junior Hockey League streak to eight games.

Mel Bridgeman, Bob Jeffery and Dale Drelich also scored for Clippers in the Nanaimo game marred by three separate fights in the final period. Four game misconducts were dished out as a result of the fighting.

At Bellingham, Chilliwack Bruins scored twice in the first five minutes and went on to dump Bellingham Blazers 5-3. The game, second in Bellingham's new arena, drew 750 fans.

ODD MISHAP SIDELINES WALTON

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Boston Bruin right wing Mike Walton suffered lacerations of both legs and cuts on his chin Tuesday night when he tripped in his hotel room and fell through a plate-glass door.

The full extent of Walton's injuries was not known today, but the National Hockey League team expected him to be sidelined for several days.

"Mike stepped out onto the balcony for a breath of fresh air and as he started back into the room he tripped on the screen."

Johnson did not say who will replace Walton on the line with Johnny Bucyk and Fred Stanfield when the Bruins face St. Louis Blues Thursday night.

Best-Ever Purse In New Tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — The Professional Golfers Association announced Wednesday the establishment of the World Open golf championship, worth a record $500,000 with $100,000 going to the winner.

The two-week event is scheduled for Nov. 6 through Nov. 18 at the Pinehurst Country Club in Pinehurst, N.C.

The starting field will consist of 240 players, approximately 170 from the United States. Included will be open champions from 35 to 50 foreign countries.

The tournament will consist of 144 holes, 72 holes each week.

The previous high purse was the now-defunct $300,000 Dow Jones Open in 1970 which awarded $60,000 to the winner.

The tournament will be sponsored by diamondhead Corp., of Mountainside, N.J., and will be set up by Pinehurst's Moore Memorial Hospital as a benefit program.

Diamondhead and the PGA have a two-year contract with renewal options of up to 10 years.

The final score was India 210 and 155, England 174 and 163.

Yankees Sold for $10 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's tradition-rich New York Yankees were sold Wednesday with CBS receiving $3.2 million less than it paid for the American League team in

"It's the best buy in sports today," said Cleveland shipbuilder George Steinbrenner, part of a 12-man syndicate which paid the network $10 million cash for the Yankees.

"The Yankees belong in Yankee Stadium. And, they should always be winners. We don't plan to move anywhere except upward in the standings."

Michael Burke, a former CBS vice president assigned to operate the Yankees, negotiated the purchase with his former boss, William Paley, president of the network.

Burke, who remains as Yankee president, said CBS "broke even" of the years despite the reduced selling price. He said some years were financially profitable.

"CBS was a good owner, one that showed great patience and strength during some difficult years," he said.

Burke, no longer associated with CBS, admitted the network was embarrassed at times to have a team that had become a loser after dominating major league baseball for over 40 years.

New York's pinstripers were artistic failures compared to the old days. The Yankees had won 29 pennants — and 14 of the last 16 — when the network took control. In the eight seasons since, New York finished no higher than third under the CBS eye.

Attendance slumped to 966,328 in 1972, the first time the Yankees failed to crack a million since 1945. Meanwhile, the Mets were packing in 2,134,185 across town.

Ralph Houk signed a three-year extension to his contract as Yankee manager late last summer. Houk, and the rest of the organization "will remain intact," said Burke.

Steinbrenner, 43, has dabbled in sports ownership before. He once had Cleveland Pipers of Abe Saperstein's ill-fated American Basketball League. He currently owns a chunk of Chicago Bulls in the National Basketball Association.

"We plan absentee ownership as far as running the Yankees is concerned," said the president of the American Shipbuilding Co. of Cleveland. "We're not going to pretend we're something we aren't. I'll stick to building ships."

Fan Turnout Hits New Low At Wembley

LONDON (AP) — A team representing the three new countries in the European Common Market defeated the six old members 2-0 in an international exhibition soccer game at Wembley Stadium Wednesday before 36,500 fans.

The crowd was the smallest ever to watch an international at Wembley, which holds 100,000. The previous low was 41,000.

Goals for the winners — represented by players from Britain, the Republic of Ireland and Denmark — were scored by Danish star Henning Jensen and Colin Stein of Scotland.

Jensen's goal, in the first minute of the second half, came on a header after a cross by veteran Bobby Charlton of Manchester United and England, who was captain for the game.

Stein's goal came on a pass from Alan Ball of England. The first goal was scored with Italian goalkeeper Dino Zoff in the net as a substitute. He hadn't touched the ball before the goal was scored.

Norwich City In Final

NORWICH, England (Reuter) — Norwich City qualified to meet Tottenham Hotspur in the English Football League Cup final March 3 when they beat Chelsea 1-0 here Wednesday night to win the two-leg semi-final 3-0 on aggregate.

Steve Govier, heading in a corner-kick in the 49th minute, scored the only goal in the match to add to the 2-0 victory Norwich achieved at Chelsea in the first leg.

Norwich, leading 3-2 with six minutes remaining when fog caused the second leg match to be abandoned two weeks ago, reached the final for the second time, having won the trophy in 1962.

CHEMAINUS — Sparked by Mike Waberski's excellent goaltending, Juan de Fuca Gulls topped Fuller Lake Flyers 7-2 Wednesday at Fuller Lake Arena to move within one point of leading Victoria Nixons Trucking in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Barry McLaughlin scored two goals and Ed Nichols, Al Hardy, Dave Archibald and Barry Hilton added singles for Gulls. Doug Clark and Clint Eccles replied for Flyers.

Burning, Raping Widow Gets Boys Probation

PHILADELPHIA — As required by state law, two boys have been placed on probation instead of in jail for beating, raping, robbing and burning an 84-year-old widow in a housing project last November.

The defendants, 11-year-old Victor Arce and 10-year-old Ronald Irby, pleaded guilty and were put on probation Tuesday by Judge Vito N. Pisciotta.

"In the case of a youth under 12 years old, the state can't commit him unless he has a prior contact with the authorities," said the district attorney's office.

Police said the woman let the boys into her apartment after they told her they would do her shopping for her.

During the next four days, police said, the boys took $200 of the widow's money, spray-painted graffiti on the walls, wrecked the apartment, raped her, cut her hair and burned her breast and stomach with matches and a heated steel comb.

The woman finally was rescued when a social worker made a routine visit.

OTTAWA — Senator Paul Martin, former external affairs minister and government leader in the Senate, will represent Canada at a Washington memorial service Friday for former president Harry Truman.

Martin's office also announced today that he will attend a memorial service in Boston Sunday for former Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

The Boston service was organized by university friends of Pearson.

ALBANY, N.Y. — Governor Nelson Rockefeller, saying a "reign of terror" by drug addicts must stop, has called for mandatory life sentences for drug pushers and for those who commit violent crimes while under the influence of drugs.

The proposal was contained in the governor's statement to the opening session of the New York State legislature.

CINCINNATI, Ohio—Walter Jack Rollins, 66, author of the songs Frosty the Snowman and Peter Cottontail, died Monday night.

Rollins, who wrote the lyrics for about 500 songs, many of them in the country-and-western style, died in hospital after a short illness.

MIAMI — Angela Davis received a warm welcome on her arrival in Havana on New Year's Eve, according to a Cuban radio broadcast monitored here Monday.

The broadcast said Miss Davis, a prominent member of the U.S. Communist Party, arrived from Madrid, after a circuitious trip from the United States.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Dave Sams, a 15-year-old Buckeye Junior High School student, believes he has discovered a comet.

Sams said he made the discovery Dec. 21, using a $90 telescope. The reported new comet is located near the constellation Orion.

The teen-ager said a Harvard astronomer indicated there was a "very good possibility" Sams had discovered a new comet. If his discovery is confirmed, the new comet would be named after him.

BEDFORD, England —Mrs. Marie Meard pulled a 12-ton truck 50 yards down a main street New Year's Day — by her teeth. It was all for women's lib.

"I did it just to prove it can be done by a woman," said the 98-pound mother of two.

EMPLOYEES MUST WEAR GAS MASKS

VENICE, Italy (Reuter) — All 50,000 workers in Porto Marghera, the industrial port of Venice, must be equipped with gas masks to protect them from air pollution under an order issued by authorities Wednesday.

The order was sent to 206 firms with establishments at the port, including Italy's giant Montedison chemical company, by Venice's chief inspector of labor conditions.

It follows several recent cases in which groups of men have been intoxicated by industrial gas fumes. Some companies in Porto Marghera, including Montedison, already equip their men with gas masks.

Bapco Move Will Hurt B.C.: Unions

The closure later this year of the Bapco Paint Ltd. factory will result in the export of jobs from British Columbia as well as from this city, Victoria Labor Council delegates were told Wednesday night.

Owen Williams, president of Local 1947 of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trades, said the company employs close to 100 people in the warehouse and in production, but only 20 will be going to Surrey when the plant relocates.

He said paint production is just under two million gallons a year.

"The majority of this production will go to a new plant in Toronto," he said.

Williams estimated paint production at the Surrey plant will be half a million gallons a year, although the company won't actually say.

At the same time, he said Bapco Paint, a subsidiary of Canadian Industries Limited, has been "forward looking" in providing severance pay when none was required in the union contract.

Delegates expressed dismay at the continuing trend of industries to move from Victoria or close down, pointing to such examples as Sidney Roofing, Victoria Machinery Depot shipyard and major bakeries.

Neil Hindle of the boilermakers said Bapco Paint's site will "fall prey to tourist-type industry" and urged that representations be made to Industry Minister Alex Macdonald, rather than to the deputy minister as the council has done.

"The advocates for people's jobs are more important than building a tourist hotel for people to look at the harbor," he said.

Williams said people elect city councils, and they should make sure those elected will try to keep industry here because "once it's gone, it won't come back."

Al Carle of the International Woodworkers of America said "there are people bound and determined to make this a tourist-only town and the people will just take in and out everyone's washing."

Darrell Wolker of the boilermakers union said "cities like Calgary and Lethbridge have people on the payroll to try and bring industry in but in this dead city they drive industry out."

THE PLANNERS

Is This Secretive Group Doing a Job for City?

What is the Advisory Planning Commission, what does it do and what should it be doing?

These are some of the questions examined by Times city hall reporter Paul Moss in a three-part series starting today.

The introductory article discusses the strangely anonymous, secretive character of the APC in Victoria, its origins and its influence on the way Victoria has developed in the last decade and a half.

It also looks at the general role of advisory planning commissions in the community, actual and potential.

Part 2 on Friday gives a cross-section of views on the city's planning commission, including suggestions for broadening its membership and criticisms of its cumbersome method of operation.

The final article in the series cites an example of a successful advisory planning commission in B.C. and shows how this provides vigorous community representation and a citizen's voice in the planning process.

Part 3 also discusses the importance of an overall plan for Victoria and the major contribution the APC can make toward this objective.

VAPC stands for Victoria Advisory Planning Commission, but cynics could be excused for suggesting the first two letters are short for Very Anonymous.

The simple fact is that the Advisory Planning Commission is no more in the public eye than the upper echelons of the Mafia or the Central Intelligence Agency.

Yet, strictly in the context of Victoria's physical development, the APC wields (or has the potential to wield) almost as much power as those organizations do internationally. And it does so in an apparent void — accountable to no one for its decisions, holding its meetings behind closed doors and withholding minutes of those meetings from public scrutiny.

The commission has functioned thus since it was first established by bylaw in 1958 as one of the chief instruments with which the city would shape its planning policies, on the mould of citizen opinion.

Those 14 years have seen more dramatic, far-reaching changes in the fabric of Victoria than ever before in its history and the changes have, to a greater or lesser degree, been determined by the attitudes of the APC.

★

Along the way, however, this group has rarely attracted more than a passing glance from anyone, as the meagre file of clippings in the newspaper's library shows only too clearly.

In recent months, the only attention has been critical, much of it coming from Mayor Peter Pollen.

Never one to mince words, Pollen said last year that the commission had been used as "a vehicle for political patronage and promises . . . of clandestine relationships . . . you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours."

On another occasion, Ald. Alf Hood became vocally impatient at the length of time taken by the APC in dealing with an important planning study on the Old Town.

Although such isolated expressions of discontent add up to no particular pattern, there are indications that the commission may be undergoing some critical study at city hall over the next few months.

Almost certainly playing an important part in that review will be alderman-elect Sam Bawlf, who recently advocated complete restructuring of the advisory planning procedure in the city to enable the establishment of several "local area commissions," so that neighborhoods would have a say in planning matters affecting them.

It is doubtful whether all this will produce a totally new-look commission, exposed to the rude public stare, warts n' all.

But, as Pollen has pointed out, the APC is in the throes of evolution and changes there will be, not least in its role and method of operation.

What are advisory planning commissions and what do they do?

Under the B.C. Municipal Act a local council may establish a commission, usually composed of public-spirited citizens and aldermen, with the rather vague purpose of advising it on planning matters.

According to the Community Planning Association of Canada a commission's role is to "give advice and act as the citizen's voice in the (planning) process."

The key word is advice: a commission can do no more than offer it. Only council itself, as the elected governing body within the community, can make decisions on planning matters — although in practice it rarely happens that the city commission's advice is ignored by council.

(One reason for this could be that five of the nine city council members including the mayor are also members of the commission).

The commission members, in turn, rely on the professional planner for advice. Their membership often includes such persons as architects, engineers and developers but that doesn't make the APC a group of "lay planners," as many mistakenly believe.

One idealistic view of the commission's role is that it should provide a forum for citizen opinion to assist both planner and council, and also act as a "sounding board" for testing planning policies and proposals before these are explored in detail by council and planning staff.

A criticism of the system some years ago by the Planning Institute of British Columbia was, until the beginning of last year, valid in its application to the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission.

In a brief to the provincial government, the institute said a commission's value in the larger urban centres "becomes highly suspect in this increasingly complex age (particularly where the commission becomes the bastion of the status quo and — or overly concerned with detail). Attempts to have the commission deliberate long-range alternatives have not met with much success."

It was because then-newly-elected Mayor Peter Pollen felt that the APC was "overly concerned with detail," that he made one significant change in its workload last January.

★

The time-consuming chore of considering routine rezoning applications was taken away from the commission and handed to council's planning committee. At that time, Pollen expressed the hope that this would free the APC for the major task of debating important planning studies and over-all development concepts.

The past 12 months have seen that hope only partially realized.

Ald. Mike Young, planning committee chairman, explains why:

"Unfortunately, the commission meets once or at the most twice a month. It is fairly unwieldy and not suitable for the ingestion of vast amounts of material or the provision of a great number of ideas.

"In these respects they are lagging. I think it's recognized by the members themselves — they realize the workload for the amount of time available is far too great.

"As an instrument of planning policy we were expecting too much of the APC."

Warm Air Might Bring Snow

A trough of warm air will ease the icy clamp on Victoria today but it will be short-lived.

Moving down from the B.C. interior, the warmer air could bring some snow flurries.

A power failure, lasting three hours, plagued the Nanaimo area Wednesday night. Snowfall varied — about 2½ inches being recorded at Cassidy airport, 10 miles south of Nanaimo; seven inches in Wellington and five inches in downtown Nanaimo.

LANKY LOAVES turned out by local baker Bob Betker each measure over five feet and encompass a total of 36 normal French sticks. He baked them for German and Hungarian New Year festivities. Each weighs about 20 pounds and took two men to twist to shape. (John McKay photo.)

Forest Branch 'Minimizes' Runaway Slash Fire Costs

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The B.C. Forest Service is camouflaging the responsibility of industry for runaway slash fires, Victoria Sierra Club chairman John Willow charged today.

Willow said the government service is "minimizing the losses."

The charge follows a forest service report Wednesday that slash-burning fires destroyed 6,500 acres of forest on Vancouver Island causing damages tentatively estimated at $50,000.

The fires resulted in protests from conservationists and some professional foresters as the damage involved public lands. So far several companies have been fined for not complying with regulations.

Two Canadian Forestry Service scientists have since suggested that slash-burning operations be managed by experts instead of company logging crews.

Willow said in estimating forest losses, the service did not include job loss or company profits, cost of replanting, loss of wood fibre.

"On the other hand in forest fires ascribed to other causes all these losses are taken into consideration," he said. "You have just to read the B.C. Forest Service annual report."

Willow also noted that slash-burning fires are listed under brush-burnings, instead of industrial fires.

"Ironically, he add, "if the B.C. Wildlife Branch should request that a belt of trees be left standing along a river bank, the service will oppose it mainly on job losses and the loss of timber," he said.

A government spokesman denied BCFS is trying to hide the losses but admitted the method of estimating losses caused by slash fires needs revising.

"For immature timber we calculate our losses on a table last revised in 1960," he said. "It needs revision as it does not take into consideration the loss of timber in the future."

He also admitted cost of replanting, job losses, loss of future timber and loss of equipment are not included in fire fighting costs.

"Our fire-fighting costs do not reflect the various losses, but we have to use some formula in estimating our damages," he said.

"Our information is mostly supplied by the forest industry and sometimes we are suspicious that it is either exaggerated or minimized," he said. "But that's the game."

Willow said the spokesman had been frank but he did not see how he could argue that fire losses were not being minimized.

"We know all data on tree farm licences are supplied by the industry," he said. "But it is not right. It is like letting a mouse in a cheese factory."

"We are not opposed to industry making a profit from forest lands," he added. "All we want is proper management."

Target: Waterfront Property

B.C. is not moving fast enough to acquire and set aside shoreline property for public use, Lloyd Brooks, deputy minister of recreation, says in a report published by the Planning Institute of British Columbia.

The deputy warns there are certain social and economic changes which indicate waterfront property will be increasingly at the focal point of the resource controversy in the future.

"People get very vocal about the threat of loss of rights to access, visual or otherwise," he said. "Every social and economic trend indicates a vastly growing demand for this finite resource."

He said the trend is reflected in the spectacular splurge in the products used in the pursuit of leisure camping gear, boats, second homes. These all demand space and access to water.

Another aspect of this trend is the race for vacation home land which extends into Canada from the United States, he said.

This has resulted in pressures on choice waterfront areas, he said. Property prices have risen to such an extent that it is difficult for B.C. residents to get land or for park authorities to buy land for the public.

BROOKS
. . . "growing demand"

"There are something like 200,000 leisure homes built every year in the U.S.," he stated. "There are 9,000 vacation land development firms in the U.S. Most of these tend to be water-oriented in the lands they are developing. They are running out of suitable land and are extending their operations into Canada on a large scale."

He said there are 10,000 American boats entering Georgia Strait every year. This number is increasing at roughly 10 to 12 per cent per year.

Brooks said B.C. has misused its shoreline especially near and in urban areas.

He advocates detailed inventories of the shoreline, and a study of their capabilities somewhat like what has been done by the U.S. government.

Brooks also believes both provincial and federal governments should be involved in setting aside waterfront property.

He said the parks branch is working on a program to acquire key islands and waterfront areas in Georgia Strait.

"We have an objective in the parks branch to set up a chain of parks which will be a short travel distance apart all the way up the Island groups," he states. "We have 108 provincial park proposals in and about the Strait of Georgia region.

$10,839 Given To Bangladesh

Greater Victoria residents donated $10,839.81 to last year's Housing for Bangladesh appeal of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

The total is down $6,000 from the year before when Victoria gave $16,641, the highest amount since the annual campaign started here in 1953.

Money raised by the national campaign will support 100 Unitarian Service Committee (USC) projects in Africa, India, Korea, Hong Kong and Bangladesh.

This year's special project is to build houses for Bengali refugees who returned to Bangladesh after the civil war there in 1971 to find their homes destroyed.

The USC pledged to build 1,000 houses, costing $140 each, by Christmas Day. Each is 10'x14', with matted bamboo walls and a corrugated iron roof. The USC's partner agency in India, the Rama Krishna Mission, is supervising the building.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director of the USC, was hoping to raise $1 million in funds and $500,000 in gifts in kind in this year's campaign. Dr. Hitschmanova has been in charge of the USC since she founded it in 1945.

Fireplace Can Be Divider

Traditionally, the major percentage of fireplaces occupy an outside wall. This harks back to the olden days when house design and construction were basically simple and fireplaces provided the only heat in a house. And most came equipped with a small door in the rear for removal of ashes from the outside. But with the changes in home designs and with technological advances in heating equipment, the fireplace has become an ornament, and as such no longer has to be tucked into an outside wall.

In the room shown here, designed by Raul Garduno, the fireplace stands alone in the center of a large area, and by its placement serves not only as the focal point of the living room, but also as a divider, breaking the one large room into smaller areas.

The fireplace design itself is noteworthy, wrapped around as it is by a six foot high concrete block wall. Actually, the fireplace is little more than an open space outlined with a metal link screen, and with a black glass hood above going to the ceiling. The wall, then defines the fireplace area and presents an interesting patterned surface to the other parts of the room. In fact, the deeply indented mortar and the light concrete color offer a handsome contrast to the smooth black glass.

Common Drugs 'No Help'

WASHINGTON — A team of Philadelphia doctors has reported that neither aspirin nor the heavily-advertised nonprescription drug Compoz does any good in relieving tension.

In fact, the doctors reported this week in the journal of the American Medical Association, patients taking Compoz —whose advertising claims that it relieves tension—and aspirin complained more about side effects than patients taking Librium, a leading tranquilizer that requires a prescription.

"Considering not only the ineffectiveness of aspirin and the tranquilizer Compoz but also their potential hazards," wrote Drs. Karl Rickels and Peter T. Hesbacher, "it seems clear that such agents cannot be recommended for use in the treatment of mild to moderate tension and anxiety states."

The study is especially significant now because the Food and Drug Administration is beginning to look at the safety and effectiveness of nonprescription drugs.

The Senate Monopoly Subcommittee held six days of hearings on non-prescription drugs last month, focusing mainly on cold remedies.

In this week's JAMA report, Dr. Rickels and his co-author from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, Dr. Peter T. Hesbacher, pointed out that a patient who gets a prescription medicine at least has the assurance "of receiving a drug which has been demonstrated helpful to many and harmful to few."

"The individual who purchases a non-prescription drug," the JAMA article reported, "has no such assurance."

Rickels and Hesbacher, working with 18 general practitioners in Philadelphia, divided into four groups 166 nonpsychiatric patients showing signs of tension or anxiety.

One group received Compoz, picked because it calls itself in its advertising the "largest selling nonprescription sedative for simple relief of simple nervous tension." Another group received aspirin because it is frequently used for relaxation and decrease of nervous tension.

Another group was given Librium and the fourth group received sugar pills—a placebo.

In no way, the report concluded, "could Compoz or aspirin be demonstrated to produce significantly more sympton relief than placebo, and both drugs produced significantly less improvement than chlordiazepoxide (Librium)."

Moreover, Compoz caused more side effects and more serious side effects than Librium in this short-term study. In a longer study, the report said, "the more serious hazards of both Compoz and aspirin would probably become apparent."

Compoz can cause blurred vision, increased urinary retention and, in higher doses with prolonged use, mental confusion, excitement and delirium. Aspirin, in high doses for long periods, can cause stomach problems.

Earful of Carrots Baby Status Symbol

One of the greatest traumas facing any new mother occurs one shameful day in the park when you discover that your baby is the only one who doesn't have strained carrots in his right ear.

"He isn't on solid food yet?" the other mothers murmur. "What kind of pediatrician do you have anyway?"

You rush home with your baby, certain that he is in imminent danger of contracting rickets. Should you change pediatricians? Or at least change parks?

But to your intense relief, early the following morning, your pediatrician suggests that you start your baby on a jar of strained carrots. He also suggests that you not call him at 4 a.m. again.

After hanging up, you realize that you have neglected to ask whether the strained carrots come before or after his bottle. Surprisingly, the pediatrician recognizes your voice immediately and suggests, among other things, that you give your baby the strained carrots before his bottle, when he is hungriest.

Unfortunately, that evening your baby makes it extremely clear that no matter how hungry he is, he would sooner be hung by his heels over a vat of acid than have anything at all to do with strained carrots.

You attempt to reason with him, pointing out that one jar isn't so terribly much, especially considering that he has already spilled more than half of it on the kitchen ceiling and the cat. To prove how delicious strained carrots are, you take a bite, only to discover that they are every bit as revolting as he has led you to believe. "Yum — yum!" you chortle, trying not to swallow. Your baby, who can spot a hypocrite with amazing accuracy for a two-month-old, shudders sympathetically.

The pediatrician assures you that he will eat eventually. Until then, the only thing to do is to smear his right ear with what's left of the strained carrots, go to the park, and fake it.

STREET CLEANER KEPT HIS VOW

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — A French lawyer who has been sweeping streets since 1949 to fulfil a promise has finally been offered a better job.

Mordechai Leon, 60, a French Second World War hero, was sentenced in Cairo in 1949 to 15 years in jail for criticizing the Egyptian regime, but was pardoned after French intervention.

Relieved at escaping the long sentence, Leon, a Jew who speaks six languages, vowed to clean streets in Israel for the entire period he was to have spent in prison.

Municipal officials in the small town of Bnei Brak near Tel Aviv where Leon carried out his vow, said he was a model worker and have offered him a better job. But it is not yet certain if he will take it.

NAME CHANGES IN BIG DEMAND EVERY MONTH

VANCOUVER (CP) — What's in a name?

Each month, between 80 nd 85 British Columbia residents officially change their names, says Beverly Thomas of the provincial vital statistics department.

Applicants aren't required to give reasons for wanting to switch, but Mrs. Thomas said the department "gets a large number of recent immigrants applying for name change."

Last March, citizenship requirements were dropped and now a person wanting to obtain a new handle under the Change of Name Act only has to have lived in British Columbia for one year prior to the application.

About half of the applications are from women. But women must be single, divorced or widowed to qualify for a surname change.

"We've had quite a number of calls recently from women wondering if they have to take their husband's surname; I guess it's to do with this women's lib stuff," said Mrs. Thomas, who has never felt the urge to change her own name.

There are a number of applications to alter the spellings of names, such as Shirley to Shurlee or Ryan to Ryon, "for numerological reasons."

And some people have been advised to change their names by the Kabalarian Fraternal Organization, which believes "your name reveals your destiny" and a better name will result in a better life.

A pamphlet issued by the organization, founded in 1926 by Alfred J. Parker of Vancouver, promises that the Kabalarian philosophy "teaches how a name may be balanced to eliminate hereditary weakness and ensure a complete and happy life."

"The surname is the hereditary influence. When changed through marriage it can recreate or destroy your life. The change of surname invariably changes a woman's nature — not always constructively — thus causing incompatibilities, divorce and sometimes even death."

Mrs. Thomas said that under current regulations, if a husband changes his surname to something his wife doesn't like "she has to go along with it since she's married to him." But parents can't change the name of any child over the age of 12 without the child's consent.

Any person 19 or over filling the requirements can get a name changed to "almost anything" simply by filling out a form and sending it along with $10 to the provincial director of vital statistics.

Notice of the change must be advertised in a local paper and the approved change is announced in the B.C. Gazette.

She said she didn't know of any cases of a woman applying for a male name or a man applying for a feminine name, but there was "absolutely no reason" why a woman couldn't change her name to Bobby Orr.

Jennifer Brigid Lulham didn't like the sound of her name so she went to a public lecture offered by the Kabalarian organization. A member of the organization made an "amazingly good analysis of my character" and recommended a list of more suitable names. Her new name is Alannah Matthews.

Margaret Gail Ditmars thought her name was like "tight clothing . . . I felt uncomfortable." When friends called her Gail she got a bad feeling, "like it wasn't my true self."

When Margaret Gail decided to change her name legally to Rashida Ditmars "my soul responded. I had a great lightness and happiness. I still feel that way."

Biology Lectures On Tape

TORONTO (CP) — All first-year biology students at the University of Toronto will get their lectures on tape next year.

Bill Friend, a zoology professor, who helped develop the course, said the tapes do not make for an impersonal course.

"The hardware does the repetitive stuff and the student has control of the pace," he said. "All of a sudden, he has an infinitely patient professor. The course is much more personalized," he said.

Top Class TV for North

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

TORONTO (CP) — There are children scattered in small Northern Ontario communities who may have never seen an automobile and who live on dirt floors.

But they also may have better educational television than children in some major U.S. or Canadian cities.

In 17 isolated schools the Ontario Educational Communications Authority OECA has installed modern videotape-fed television sets, which show up to 30 half-hour tapes a month.

Although the service has completed a year's operation with effusive praise from the local teachers, it has been kept in existence only through improvised OECA financing.

Ron Dodge, assistant supervisor of school youth programs, explained in an interview that the original agreement provided for the Ontario ministry of education to take over the program's expenses this school year. But the ministry failed to do so, perhaps because of a general restraint on its spending.

Faced with the alternative of abolishing the service, OECA decided to take on the unplanned cost of the program.

"To place this kind of facility in the school and develop some degree of reliance on this kind of resource in the school and then after a year take it out would be a travesty."

Mr. Dodge saw the service as being of tremendous value in the communities involved, which were selected because they were unable to receive the signal of any television stations carrying OECA programs.

"In very many of them, the main street is a railway line. There are no roads. These kids have never seen a car . . ."

Well-Equipped

Although the schools — mostly one-or two room — are comfortable and reasonably well-equipped, Mr. Dodge said, the rest of the community may be primitive. Speaking of a spot north of Nipigon:

"In that Ferland area, for example, they have an excellent school, a large school, two classrooms plus the teacher's apartment at the back with two bedrooms, kitchen, and living room combined, washroom, this sort of thing, flush toilets for the children.

"And yet in the community itself, their homes are unheated, they are living on dirt floors — not dirty floors, but I mean there is just no wood on the floor. There are no roads.

"To go down to the lake where aircraft will land, they will have to walk down a footpath that is 1½ to two miles long and downhill, so that anything they pack that comes in by air they have to carry uphill.".

Only about 1,100 children are in the 17 schools involved, ranging from about 125 in Armstrong and 160 in the two Nakina schools to just over 20 in each of Ferland, Auden and Humphreyville.

Yet each has a $1,500 videotape machine, a $275 television monitor and the use of $900 in videotapes. Officials said they are unable to estimate the total cost of the program because so many portions of it are absorbed in general OECA services.

Mr. Dodge noted that not only the children benefit — in many communities the educational films are shown at night to parents also.

OECA reports show that the videotapes generally get good use, although some mistakes in selection have been made. One school got a program in German by error and a series on hockey was sent out after the hockey season.

Ideally, he said, the individual teachers should choose the programs. But they did not know what videotapes OECA has available.

Mr. Dodge said OECA is concerned about the possibility of cultural contamination:

"It would be dangerous and extremely arrogant, it seems to me, if we were to operate on the presumption that our objective were to citify these kids in these little communities and show them what life in the big city is like so they can be the same as the rest of us.

Choose Lifestyle

"This would be wrong. What it is our responsibility to do as we perceive it is to equip these children to make an intelligent choice about the lifestyle that they would use later on.

"You ought not to, and we're careful not to, convey values to these children that would destroy the credibility of the lifestyle in which they now are existing."

All too frequently, he said, such people who move to the cities end up at the bottom of the economic ladder.

"But they must be given the choice. And the choice must reside within themselves, not be made for them."

DDT Mouse Tests Show Small Danger

LYONS, France — Tests of some 5,000 mice at the new International Agency for Research on Cancer here have shown that even at the lowest levels of DDT added to the diet, an increased incidence of tumors in males was observed.

At the same time, continuing studies of human populations long exposed to DDT have shown no rise in cancerous tumors that could be attributed to the insecticide.

The findings therefore reinforce the view that the use of DDT should be avoided where alternate means are practicable, but not where it is the only weapon against such carriers of lethal disease as malarial mosquitos and tsetse flies.

The results of the mouse tests are supported by other experiments conducted recently in Milan and Moscow. The experiments here were described in a recent interview by Dr. Vladimir Turusov of the Soviet union, who is in charge of pesticide research at the cancer center. The latter is an agency of the World Health Organization set in this city in 1967.

On Turusov's desk is a vial containing a mouse's liver tumor that grew to one-third the total body weight of a normal mouse. While such tumors are common, particularly in mice receiving 250 parts of DDT to a million parts of food, only rarely do they seem malignant.

Of 185 liver tumors found in 497 mice being given various dosages of DDT, only four showed signs of spreading in a malignant manner. However, many mice had tumors in more than one organ.

Even at the lowest dose rate of two parts of DDT per million, tumor incidence in male mice was significantly higher compared to those fed a normal diet. According to Turusov, liver tumors have occurred in 148 per cent of those receiving this low dose, compared to 22 per cent in those on normal food.

In female mice such tumors were rare both in those on the low dose and those on normal diet.

At the Institute of Experimental and Clinical Oncology in Moscow, treatment of cultures of mouse lung tissue exposed to DDT showed changes similar to those induced by known cancer — causing agents. However, work at the Research Institute of Oncology in Leningrad has shown less clearcut effects on rats exposed to DDT.

In addition to sponsoring such studies the agency here

has supported analyses to assess the growing accumulation of DDT in human fat tissue. According to agency scientists, one of the world's highest levels is in Israel, apparently because DDT has been sprayed inside homes.

Another area of high burden of this pesticide is Thailand where males in the 25 to 44 age group showed levels of about 20 parts per million in their fatty tissue.

In its annual report for last year the agency said, however: "A preliminary evaluation would seem to indicate no correlation between DDT exposure and primary liver cancer and or cancer at other sites."

However, Turusov says his view is that the findings call for "caution' in using DDT.

Dr. Walter Davis of the agency cites the prolonged interval that has been found to elapse between certain types of exposure and the onset of cancer.

Thus cigarette smoking became widespread early in the century but the incidence of lung cancer did not hit its peak until 15 or 20 years later. Likewise, it was not until 25 years after some pregnant women were treated with stilbestrol to avert miscarriages that daughters born of such pregnancies developed cancer of the vagina.

Pensioners 'Forgotten'

LONDON (CP) — Two lonely deaths and a third case of severe poverty in a period of record-breaking Christmas spending have aroused concern about Britain's forgotten old folk who somehow slip through the welfare net.

Mary McCoy, a 68-year-old widow, lay dead for two months before being discovered by relatives Christmas Eve in her Liverpool apartment. She had choked to death after eating cardboard. There was no food in the apartment.

Barbara Nappin, 52, and unmarried, also died alone in her Portsmouth home in the midst of a crowded municipal housing development. Her body was not found for more than two months, until police broke in last Saturday.

Lucy Sparrow, 83-year-old widow, was found in time by a friend who called to see her Christmas Eve. She was eating a piece of lard for lunch and was in poor physical and mental condition. There was no other food in her Northamptonshire home, a municipal prefabricated cottage in filthy condition.

In the case of Mrs. McCoy, her relatives apparently thought she was staying with other members of the family and did not check with each other.

"We never realized she had been on her own so long," said her niece, Norma Medaloso.

Miss Nappin and Mrs. Sparrow, with no close relatives, had simply lost touch with the world, neighbors said later. Miss Nappin had a reputation for being unfriendly, but even the welfare department had not kept in touch with her. Its file on her ended in 1970. Social security official John Brodgen said: "Miss Nappin slipped through the welfare net — she just slipped through."

Both The Daily Mirror and The Guardian said the tragic cases showed the need for more good-neighborly behavior.

In a front-page article headed "Who Cares?" Mirror Women's editor Marjorie Proops said Britons were well known for "keeping ourselves to ourselves.

"It's time we changed our withdrawn habits . . . . It's time we started being good neighbors."

The Guardian points out that the number of old folk is increasing. To enable them to face their last years in dignity, the newspaper says, local welfare departments should be backed by voluntary support from neighbors.

"It is the neighbor, not the social worker or even the family, who is the best and first line of defence against such tragedies . . ."

The North London borough of Camden already has a "good-neighbor" scheme in which the council pays a small sum to about 200 persons, mostly retired, to aid the welfare department by visiting old folk and helping them with shopping.

"The basic thing is that neighbors should care," said one official, "and it is all too often the case that people in towns don't want to know their neighbors."

Grocery Bill Tops All

By REID MACLEAN

HALIFAX (CP) — Halifax pastor J. C. Mack probably has a larger grocery bill than any other man in the city.

His wife, Ollie, makes her weekly trip to the local food store, gathers her groceries and watches the sales clerk total the amount of close to $125 on the cash register.

That's a lot of money for a week's groceries but then Mr. Mack usually manages to feed about 70 people a day with what has been bought.

He's been doing that for two years now with the help of several volunteers, donations and the facilities of his Cornwallis Street Baptist Church.

The 70 or so daily recipients are elementary school children, who go to the church for a hot meal when the noon bell rings.

The "hot lunch" program for school children began in 1971 as a feature of the Christian social action program undertaken by the church to serve meals to children of working parents who otherwise might not have a nourishing noon lunch.

In 1971 an average of 35 children were involved in the program. In 1972 that number doubled.

Local volunteers and many of the teachers help make the program work which often means giving up their own lunch hour to help prepare the food, serve it and wash the dishes.

The cost of the program which operates during the school year averages $5,000 yearly and is obtained through local churches and individual donations.

Usually the meals include beef stews, hot soups, vegetables and desserts, all planned with the help of the dietary staff of the Izaak Walton Killam Children's Hospital.

Mr. Mack called the program a "most viable means of showing that the church is relevant in the social, as well as spiritual, needs of the people today."

He said the social benefits of gathering all the children together are often more important than the meal itself.

The social action program of the church also operates a clothing depot and plans to develop a special five-day-a-week program for senior citizens.

Pill Can Harm Unborn Babies

HALIFAX (CP) — Dr. H. Lawrence Vallet of Dalhousie University, a specialist in children's endocrine diseases, said recently the birth control pill does not harm women who take them in the same way that it could harm the fetus.

Dr. Vallet said in a statement Friday there are hormones similar to those used in the pill which have been shown to cause sexual ambiguity in the genetic female born to a mother having taken hormones early in pregnancy.

"Many reports have shown that the pill can in certain high risk women cause thombeombolic phenomena or bring about clinical diabetes mellitus," he said.

'Junior' Correct

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I named our son John Allen Jones II after my husband. We used "the second" because we didn't want to call the baby "Junior." We were later told that "the second" should not be used when a boy is named after his father. It is used only when a boy is named after another relative bearing the same name. We know several people who have used "the second" when naming a son after his father. Have all those people made a mistake or has the rule changed?

We have one year in which to make a change in a name without any difficulties. Please tell us whether we should change "the second" to "Junior." — Needs to Know

DEAR NEEDS: Change your son's name from "the second" to "Junior." A child bearing the same name as his father is Junior. If a child bears his grandfather's name, which is different from his father's name, he is "the second." If grandfather, son and grandson all have the same name, the father of course is "Junior" and the grandson is "the third."

The use of "the second" indicates that the bearer of the name is a cousin, nephew, or grandson of the original holder of it.

DEAR ABBY: We are two girls who are having a big argument. She's 17 and I'm 18. She's a virgin and I'm not, and she says a guy can tell whether a girl is a virgin or not by the way she walks.

I say a girl doesn't walk any differently after she's gone all the way with a guy than she did before.

We'll be looking for your answer. — Waiting

DEAR WAITING: You can't tell if a girl is a virgin by the way she walks. But you can sometimes tell by the way she talks.

DEAR ABBY: The other day I was with a young friend who told me (with no shame whatsoever) that she was using her husband's telephone credit card given to him by his firm to be used for business calls only. She bragged that she made long distance telephone calls to her parents and friends all over the country and thinks nothing of it. And she said her husband said t was okay.

This young woman has four children and she would be furious if one of her children "stole" anything. Yet that is exactly what she is doing. I can't understand some parents. No wonder their children don't respect them.

I am sure her husband would lose his job if his firm ever caught on. Or do all businesses expect a certain amount of chiseling? — No Name Naturally

DEAR NO NAME: I'm sure they don't. Your friend is not only dishonest, she's stupid. Somebody should tell her husband to wise up, get his credit card back and go straight. Companies check up on that sort of thing.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WORRIED: My doctor said: "Tell the 49-year-old lady with the 52-year-old husband to keep her guard up. She is not beyond the age of child-bearing."

BEER CANS FOR BUILDING

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Maybe you've seen that television commercial where a group of young men are trying to build a house but are too busy drinking beer to care about the walls collapsing.

Alvin Miller, a University of Arizona professor of architecture, has a better idea — using the beer cans themselves to build walls and even low-cost homes.

Miller said he has designed a housing shelter for four persons using beer cans which could cost as little as $3,500. He said his design, soon to be patented, calls for stacking the cans into a mold which is then covered with a mixture of cement and fiberglass.

He said the three basic ingredients — beer cans, cement and fiberglass — are readily and cheaply available and can be put together by unskilled workmen.

Miller said he hopes to use the idea in prefabricating a low-cost housing unit using a geodesic dome concept. "A sophisticated house doesn't have to look low-cost," he said.

Miller said the average bowling alley discards enough beer cans in two nights to build a small home.

Body Tune-Ups Big Business

TORONTO (CP) — Physical fitness is getting to be big business in Toronto.

More and more people are interested in keeping the body toned up, and investment in facilities for the flabby businessman and others is running into millions of dollars annually.

Experts in the field give a variety of reasons for the renewed interest. A general impression is that it's a combination of more leisure time and increasing affluence.

Downtown executives apparently are finding that lunch time workouts give them something to help face the strains of the job.

The newest fitness emporium is one of the most luxurious. It costs an $850 initiation fee plus $370 annually to join the Cambridge Club in a new hotel just across the street from city hall.

The club has a full program and its facilities include swimming pool, whirlpool, saunas and running track. The capacity of 1,000 members is expected to be reached within a year.

"The medical societies are making fitness a prime thing because heart attacks are a prime killer," said managing director James Bentley. "The accent is on the cardiovascular system, and physical fitness strengthens the heart and lungs to enable a person to handle stress better."

Alexander C. Sandy McIntosh, who left the brokerage business to set up a downtown health centre 30 years ago, is thinking of building another one and said there is room for two or three more in the downtown section.

Among the most recent to enter the field is Robert D. Eisenberg, real estate broker and chartered accountant, whose firm is sinking $800,000 into racquets courts and physical fitness facilities in North York.

Ten years ago, he recalled, there were only three clubs here with indoor tennis facilities. He estimates there are about 55 now.

Mr. Eisenberg said some people spend between $2,000 and $3,000 a year in health clubs.

But others get by for as little as $250 at some clubs, and much less than that using public facilities.

Douglas MacLennan, associate director of the Fitness Institute in Don Mills, estimated there are more than 75 health clubs in Metro Toronto.

"There is going to be more and more leisure time and physical fitness is important to handle daily pressures," he said.

"It is particularly important for those beyond 35."

Table wines are perishable after opening. But unfinished bottles, if well stoppered, will keep in the refrigerator for about a week. One bottle will serve four people.

Sparkling wines should be well chilled before serving and finished at one sitting, because after opening the cork cannot be replaced.

There is no rule that says a certain type of wine must be served with any specific dish on any particular occasion. But by experimenting you will find that certain wines do taste better with some foods than with others.

The folder What Do You Mean By A Good Wine? also shows the different glass shapes appropriate for the various types of wine. An interesting and helpful glossary of wine terms is also included.

Massive Publishing Undertaking Begins

LONDON (CP) — One of the biggest and costliest publishing enterprises in Britain is under way. It's the fourth edition of Halsbury's Laws of England and it is not expected to be complete until the 1980s.

Twenty years have passed since the third edition, comprising 43 volumes, began publication under the editorship of Viscount Simonds. Practically everyone in Britain occupied with legal matters has looked into Halsbury.

Now a further edition of 56 volumes is being prepared, the first two of which will appear next March. All are being produced by the work's original publishers, the legal, medical and scientific London publishing firm of Butterworths.

Following tradition, the lord chancellor, Lord Hailsham of St. Marylebone, has accepted the title of editor-in-chief of the entire production. He says that he intends to scrutinize every word of the final text of each volume.

His father, Viscount Hailsham, who was also lord chancellor, edited the second edition of 27 volumes published between 1931 and 1942, though he may not have accepted personal responsibility for every word in them.

Each volume is compiled by an editorial team of legal experts in the subjects surveyed. Since the Second World War changing social attitudes have initiated new legislative policies which have not only kept Parliament active but transformed some areas of law.

The new volume will accommodate the total revision of the rules of the Supreme Court which was completed in 1966. Among important new statutes introduced in the last decade are the Resale Prices Act 1964, Race Relations Act 1965, Trade Descriptions Act 1968, Immigration Act 1971 and Industrial Relations Act 1971. New concepts and developments have included value added tax, plant breeders' rights, redundancy payments, the ombudsman, breath analysis tests and divorce reform.

While the impact of Britain's entry into the European Economic Community on the country's common law will be dealt with throughout the series, at least one volume, which is being left to the last, will cover the institutions of the European communities—the Council, the Commission, the European Investment Bank, the Social and Economic Committee and the Court of Justice.

By the 1980s the law contained in treaties will have had time to settle down. Issues by then should fall into clear focus, giving practitioners a guide to definitive treatments. Hence the idea of selecting this volume as the last in the series.

Throughout production, subscribers will receive monthly and annual supplements to keep volumes up to date.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old man who Tuesday challenged his presentence report was Wednesday sentenced to four months definite, four months indeterminate for possession of MDA by Judge William Ostler in provincial court.

Frederick William John Mitchell of 1120 McClure had contested his probation officer's report on the grounds that it "exaggerated" the man's use of alcohol and drugs.

The report had said that Mitchell told the probation officer he had started drinking aged 13, after shoplifting alcohol from a Los Angeles store. It also stated he had experimented with a variety of drugs, including mescalene, hashish, marijuana, phenobarbitol, MDA and psyllocibin.

In court Wednesday, David Huggins, the probation officer who prepared Mitchell's report, reviewed his statements of the previous day. The accused declined to ask any further questions.

Osfler sentenced the accused on a Dec. 2 MDA possession charge, in which he was apprehended in the Yates St. carpark with seven caps of the drug in his possession.

A 28-year-old Saanich woman was sent to prison for a total of three months on charges of fraud and false pretences under $200.

Daphne Catherine Kirkpatrick, of 11-944 Tattersall, pleaded guilty to stealing items of identification from a fellow nurse and opening an account at Woodward's in her colleague's name Oct. 31.

Between Nov. 5 and 19, she then made a variety of purchases on this account, totalling $374.24. Because of the large number of purchases, the account was checked by the store and found to be fraudulent.

While on release awaiting sentence on this charge, she then passed 15 worthless cheques to a total value of $204.95, between Dec. 4 and 18.

Miss Kirkpatrick was sentenced to three months on the charge of fraud and three months each on the false pretences charges, the sentences to run concurrently.

Garden Flooded? Make Some Notes

During winter rains is the time to discover whether your garden is subject to flooding.

This may sound silly, for of course you will know instantly if it is flooded. But the surprising thing is that by late April or May you will have forgotten where and how much.

Flooding, as resulting in permanent plant damage and even trees dying after leaf emergence, is when water is visible on the soil surface for several days after rains cease.

Since many areas of Greater Victoria have a clay subsoil and very few inches of topsoil, temporary flooding often occurs in gardens. This happened during the first heavy rain in late November and again at Christmas, because the soil was literally too dry to absorb the amount of precipitation as it fell.

* * *

However, as soon as the rain ceased, the water on the surface gradually seeped into the soil. The clay subsoil will ultimately become dampened too. It is this clay moisture which is so useful throughout summer to the gardener.

This is not considered as flooding in a garden as free water lies around the plant roots for a matter of hours only.

A sandy or gravel subsoil allows the water to drain away more completely, with little held in reserve for the following summer's plant requirements.

After prolonged winter rain periods, there are problems in some gardens. Plants, particularly shrubs and trees which have roots in pockets of free water, are likely to either fail to leaf out or in the case of established woody shrubs and early flowering trees, they will produce flowers on bare twigs then fail to produce leaves.

These plants usually do not survive the spring season.

If you have water remaining on the surface of either your lawn or soil areas, make notes during winter as to the duration. After it leaves the surface, dig down a foot, leave the hole open and note as it fills and empties.

* * *

By spring you will know if plants in that area have been affected. Shallow rooting ones will suffer only if the surface is constantly under water. Deeper rooting shrubs and trees are most likely to show effects since the minute amounts of air normally present in the soil are excluded by the presence of water.

If the effects are noted, you will realize that drainage will need improving before replanting.

On a new property, winter notes will save you expense in cash and energy, for you will not begin permanent planting until you have eliminated the cause of flooding.

If you can figure out the cause, you will save labor, for the remedy may be simpler than you think.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

After East had captured the opening lead in today's deal, he perceived the almost certain futility of playing back his partner's suit. After a few moments of deliberation, East knew what suit he was going to return. The question that had to be resolved was which card in that suit he was going to lead to trick two. Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♡ A 3
◇ K 8 7 4
♣ K J 10 5

WEST
♠ A 3 2
♡ J 10 8 7 6
◇ 9 5
♣ 7 6 3

EAST
♠ K J 9
♡ K 4 2
◇ J 6 3 2
♣ 8 4

SOUTH
♠ Q 8 6
◇ A Q 10
♣ A Q 9 2

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 NT | Pass | 3 NT | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

On West's opening lead of the heart jack, the three was played off the board and East captured the trick with his king. It was apparent that South possessed the queen of hearts, since West's lead of the jack had denied the queen.

There flashed the thought that West might have started with a six-card heart suit, in which case South had been dealt the doubleton queen. If this set-up existed, then a heart return would drive out both North's ace and South's queen, and establish the heart suit for West.

But East decided to dismiss this possibility on the assumption that South was more likely to possess the Q-X-X or the Q-X-X-X of hearts for his one notrump opening bid. And, as he glanced at the dummy, a shift to the spade suit certainly seemed indicated.

If South had the ace and queen of spades, it would make no difference which spade East led, since South would make two spade tricks via a successful finesse. And if South possessed just the ace of spades, then all South would make would be one trick.

But if South happened to have the tripleton Q-X-X, then it did matter what spade East led. If he played a low one, then South would surely follow suit with a low spade, forcing West to win the trick with his ace (if he didn't, the board's ten-spot would capture the trick). Declarer's remaining Q-X would now be promoted to a potentially winning trick.

Upon analysis, East came up with the play that would take care of South's presumed Q-X-X of spades: at trick two, he led the jack of spades, South covered this wth his queen, and West's ace took the trick.

West promptly played back a spade, and the board's remaining 10-5 was trapped by East's K-9-7. And so the defenders cashed four spade tricks, thereby inflicting a one-trick set on declarer.

2,000-Mile Walk

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Bill Taylor, a 21-year-old student at Georgia State University, recently completed a 2,021-mile, 142-day walk along the Appalachian Trail from Georgia to Maine. Taylor said he lived mostly on dehydrated foods while he walked but feasted on hamburgers and french fries in small towns along the way.

'Yellow Peril' Has New Significance in America

By DAVID J. PAINE

HONG KONG (AP) — Among the farm houses, tenements and sprawling mansions of this colony are about 20 secret laboratories producing more and more of the heroin sold on North American street corners, Western narcotics experts say.

This "Chinese Connection" is expanding as legal and diplomatic pressure threatens the traditional "French Connection" of Turkish opium or morphine processed into heroin in France and then smuggled to the United States.

The U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs estimates the percentage of Southeast Asian heroin moving into the American market has at least doubled recently, to almost one third of the total supply.

But narcotics agents tend to scoff at precise figures. "The traffickers don't publish balance sheets, so how can we know how much they are smuggling," says one agent.

"They don't even know the over-all amount themselves."

CHANGE LOCATIONS

Norman Rolph, Hong Kong's commissioner of narcotics, says: "All the people in this business are very security and surveillance-conscious. They have a high degree of mobility.

The laboratories in which they refine the morphine are everywhere, from chicken runs to villas. They spend just a day or two in each one and then move on to another."

The opium and heroin trade in this part of the world is almost exclusively run by Chinese, and the bulk of their trafficking is for Asian addicts. Officials say there is no indication China is exporting any of the narcotics.

Thailand and Hong Kong use a reward system based on the value of drug seizures to attract informers. In Hong Kong, an informer can receive as much as $100,000 for a tip that leads to a major seizure and arrests. And nearly all major seizures come from such information.

LEADERS ESCAPE

But generally it is only the small fry that are caught. The rich financiers pulling the strings from the top evade arrest. They carefully avoid any direct contact with the people handling drugs. Even when authorities know who they are, no evidence can be obtained to convict them, agents say.

It seems doubtful any progress is being made in the most vital country of all, Burma.

About 70 per cent of the the world's illicit opium is grown in the Golden Triangle, a border region of Burma, Laos and Thailand. It is so named for its shape on a map and the money flowing into it from the opium traffic.

SUPPORTS TRIBES

Most of the opium from the Golden Triangle comes from the Burmese part, outside the domain of the government.

Tribesmen in the area live off the drug trade, and the government is reluctant to move against them because it sometimes uses them against Communist guerrillas.

At the heart of the traffic is the small Burmese border town of Tachilek on the banks of the Mae Sai River, which often is called "the opium capital of the world."

President Nixon, in hopes of throttling the heroin supply before it reaches the United States, has ordered U.S. officials overseas to encourage Asian governments to step up their fight against narcotics trafficking and addiction. And the U.S. government is helping Asian governments build up their manpower and is assisting in the crackdown.

Wiping out the opium at its source is the key to success, officials say. This means destroying fields of opium poppies in the Golden Triangle and other areas and replacing the opium with other crops.

Man Remanded In Rifle Case

DUNCAN — Donald Blair Fairweather, 18, had his case remanded without plea for a week Tuesday when he appeared in court here following an incident New Year's Eve in which a number of rifle shots were fired.

He is charged with dangerous use of a firearm. Police said earlier more than 20 shots from a .22 calibre rifle were fired into a driveway at Fairweather's Mattin Road home near Duncan. No one was injured.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Dangers of the Zen Diet

A while ago I made a note here in my newspaper column about a young woman who was so enthusiastic about the type of diet called the Zen macrobiotic diet that while following it for nine months, she went down to skin and bones, and for the last two months before she died, she was bedridden. During the autopsy, the pathologist found that she had died of emaciation due to starvation."

In the December, 1972 journal "Ca — A Cancer Journal for Clinicians," published by the American Cancer Society, I found in the section on "unproven methods of cancer management" an article on the Zen macrobiotic diet.

According to the article, following a careful review of the available literature, the American Cancer Society researchers are sure that this Zen diet poses a serious hazard to health, and it is not, as some people assume, beneficial in the treatment of cancer.

This diet has been condemned by the American Medical Association and leading experts on nutrition, and yet it is being followed by more than 10,000 persons, mostly on college campuses.

The diet was first popularized in the United States by George Ohsawa a Japanese who lived most of his life in Paris and died in 1966.

Ohsawa was satisfied that if persons lived on his diet they would be rewarded with long and vigorous lives. But actually, as I said, the diet has resulted in the death of some of the enthusiastic users. Ohsawa claimed that it could cure all illnesses, including cancer. He said "No illness is more simple to cure than cancer through a return to the most elementary and natural eating and drinking diet . . . No disease cannot be cured by proper therapy, which consists of natural food, no medicine, no surgery and no activity."

He thought that even two weeks on the diet would give amazing results in the elimination of fatigue and the renewal of sexual potency; it would increase memory; it would give a normal appetite, it would heighten decision making, and put an end to insomnia.

That great expert on foods and nutrition, Dr. Frederick Stare of Harvard, says that the Zen macrobiotic diet "has nothing to do with Buddhism, inner serenity or weight loss. All it does is destroy the health of its young disciples. This is a bogus version of the dietary discipline of Zen Buddhism."

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Blips to Warn of Hijackings

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Today, the words "I've got a hijacker on-board" from a pilot are enough to strike fear into the heart of any air traffic controller across Canada.

By 1977, a pilot won't have to say the words anymore. He will just have to turn a switch in his cockpit.

And the air traffic controller on the ground will react with the same sort of fear when the letters "HIJ" start flashing on the television-like radar screen in front of him, next to the blip of an airplane, and when a red light, also with the letters "HIJ", lights up on the console in front of him.

That red light and the flashing letters on the radar screen are the end-result of a special "hijack alert" being designed into a multi-million dollar, computerized air traffic control system, called JETS for short, that the federal transport department will have finished in seven major Canadian cities by 1977.

A similar alert will be also included, to allow pilots of transponder-equipped aircraft to electronically notify the ground of a radio failure of a general on-board emergency.

This in turn will allow authorities on the ground to concentrate on helping the aircraft in trouble and to take necessary precautions to safeguard the lives of others in the air near the aircraft and at airports on the ground where the aircraft is expected to land.

Wednesday, Computing Devices of Canada, one of about 18 companies interested in building the main part of JETS for the government, provided a simultated and almost as dramatic a representation of what an air traffic controller would see happening during a hijacking on his computerized JETS-type radar screen.

The scene in the simulation was south and west of Ottawa and a Quebecair flight suddenly started to flash on the screen, with those ominous letters "HIJ" underneath. And the appropriate red light went on in front of the scientist who was playing air traffic controller that day.

R. E. Hicks, director of special products marketing at Computing Devices, explained that the emergency alert feature in many ways perfectly exemplifies what JETS, the Joint Enroute Terminal System, is intended to accomplish.

In such an emergency situation, the pilot could be putting his life at risk trying to call the air traffic controller by radio, to say there's a hijacker on board.

And the air traffic controller is also better off, especially in the first critical moments of an emergency, concentrating on controlling traffic around the plane which is in trouble.

"The basic problem facing air traffic controllers today," Hicks explained, "is that they talk too much. They talk too much to aircraft and to other air traffic controllers."

JETS substitutes electronic information — in the form of identification codes for the individual aircraft; numbers representing air speed and altitude; numbers and letters identifying registered flight plans; and, of course, letters like "HIJ" calling attention to emergencies — for the need to talk to a pilot.

And the JETS computer does a lot of the administrative work and the calculating for the air traffic controller, eventually displaying any or all the information on a television-like screen for the controller on command.

The alert system is actually triggered by a pilot when he switches an on-board radio transponder from one electronic code that denotes the specific aircraft he is flying to another general emergency code. For a hijacking, the emergency code is 3100. There are two other codes for radio failure and general emergency.

The computerized JETS equipment would automaticaly detect the change in the code made by a pilot, and display the emergency for the air traffic controller who has the particular plane on his screen.

At present, the scheme is already used in the U.S. and Great Britain. But in Canada, pilots must use radio communications for such emergencies until 1977.

Hicks, whose company has built a prototype computer display and has high hopes of winning the $22-million contract for the JETS computers and displays, said Computing Devices will have spent about $400,000 on JETS by the time tenders close early next month.

The company, which plans to use mini-computers made by Data General in Hull and has a special agreement with Plessey Radar of England, is expanding into the air traffic control field in hopes of gaining more stability in employment of personnel, combined with more growth. The Ottawa company now employs about 1,000 persons mostly various aerospace products.

Gander, Moncton, Montreal, Winnipeg, Toronto, Edmonton and Vancouver are to be equipped with new JETS equipment, starting in 1977.

GOLDEN CANE for being the first ship to enter Montreal harbor this year was closely followed by the bailiff Wednesday. The Vestland was seized in lieu of $1 million which Jebson Ltd., a Norwegian company, claims is owed by Cast North America Ltd., the firm to which the Norwegian vessel is under contract.

Death Penalty Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI)—U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst said today the administration will probably ask Congress to make the death penalty mandatory for airplane hijackings, kidnappings, killing of prison guards and other "cold-blooded, premeditated" serious crimes.

The supreme court recently banned capital punishment as prescribed under existing laws.

Kleindienst, in his first full-fledged press conference at the justice department since he became attorney general, said generally he felt the death penalty was not a deterrent to crime, but he said he felt the capital punishment was justified in certain serious crimes such as sky-jackings.

Asked if the administration would submit legislation to Congress to legalize the death penalty in certain cases, Kleindienst replied: "I believe so." He said the legislation would make the death penalty "mandatory in these restricted cases."

The attorney general rejected suggestions that the justice department and the FBI had been "politicized" under him and former attorney general John Mitchell. Kleindienst said "no prosecutive decisions have been made on the basis of the politics of the defendant."

Thalidomide Settlement Offer Sparks Uproar in Britain

LONDON (CP) — A major controversy is boiling in Britain over unsuccessful efforts by the huge Scottish-based Distillers Co. to reach a satisfactory cash settlement with the country's 342 thalidomide children.

In less than eight hours Wednesday, the company's share value plummeted by $25.85 million, constituting a $67.50 million drop from Distiller's $1.4 billion market value at Christmas.

Two major supermarket groups have refused to buy Distillers' products, including topname whiskies and gins, and leading shareholders are clamoring for a new bid at a settlement. Distillers marketed the drug thalidomide in Britain when it was first manufactured.

The heated issue has been the main front-page story in practically all national newspapers for several days, displacing Vietnam and even Britain's entry into the European community.

But the proposal was conditional on tax concessions which the company hoped to obtain from the government on the total package. The straight cost to the firm would have been $17.75 million. When the government refused such assistance Tuesday, the offer appeared to lapse although it has not been formally withdrawn.

Pressure for a renewed offer has increased radically in the last two days.

Major shareholders, such as the giant banking concerns of Rothschilds and Schroders, the city government of London and the Prudential Assurance Co., have called for meetings with the Distillers executive to discuss the crisis.

Two chain store groups have already announced a boycott of Distillers products and others are threatening to follow suit.

The firms products include such well-known brands of whisky as Johnnie Walker, Black and White, Vat 69, Crawfords, Dewars, Haig and White Horse. It also produces Booths', Gordons' and High and Dry gins and Cossak vodka.

Fine Fare, a firm associated with Toronto-born Garfield Weston and owning 1,000 stores throughout Britain, says it will no longer promote Distillers products, although it will not yet join the boycott.

The company has almost 400,000 shareholders but the majority of stocks are held by institutional investors and a few major individual stock purchasers.

Two Canadians, Michael Burke and Joseph Claude Pierre Beauchamp of Montreal, are listed as owning 325,710 shares. Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada owns 589,300 shares.

Fraternity's Victim Buried

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Bronner, a Pierce College student abandoned by his fraternity brothers on Dec. 22 in rugged terrain north of here "to teach him a lesson," was buried Wednesday.

His frozen body was found nine days later at a base of a cliff from which he apparently had fallen trying to find his way home.

"These — these we call brothers? Do they have brotherly love?"

The fraternity brothers — John Berges, 29; Gordon Gillespy, 19, and John Morgan, 21 — were not present at the services.

No charges have been brought against the trio, but Coroner Thomas Noguchi has scheduled a public inquest in Bronner's death for Jan. 17.

ANTI-MARKET CROWD BOOS, PELTS QUEEN

LONDON (AP) — A booing and chanting crowd greeted Queen Elizabeth and other guests Wednesday night outside the Covent Garden Opera House when they arrived for the gala launching of Fanfare for Europe.

The festival was held to mark Britain's entry into the common market.

Stink bombs were thrown as about 200 anti-marketeers were kept back by police.

Traffic was checked on all roads approaching the opera house.

The Fanfare, a lavish performance before what was described as "an unprecedented number of distinguished guests," began 11 days of official celebrations to mark the enlargement of the European Economic Community.

Diplomats from the common market countries and Commonwealth members, as well as top British dignitaries, heard the shouting as they entered the hall.

Demonstrators carried placards condemning Britain's entry into the market. There were no reports of violence.

Disaster Victims Aren't Helpless: Study

LONDON (Reuter) — Victims of earthquakes, hurricanes and other natural disasters are not as helpless as generally thought and often resent outside aid, two American researchers reported today.

E. L. Quarantelli and Russell R. Dynes of the Ohio State University disaster research centre listed a series of fallacies about the behavior of victims, based on studies since 1963 of almost 100 disasters.

In an article in the magazine New Society, they also proposed their own informal law of casualty toll reports: "A casualty estimate varies inversely with distance."

In the Alaskan earthquake of 1964, they said, initial estimates circulating in Columbus, Ohio, were that 1,000 had been killed in Anchorage alone; the Chicago newspapers estimated 500 killed; in Seattle, it was down to 200; and in Anchorage 100. The actual death toll in Anchorage was seven.

Other points made by the researchers:

—The most widespread myth about disasters is that people panic and flee in face of great danger. "The major problem in an emergency is getting people to move. . . . Panic almost never occurs on a large scale. . . ."

—People are very self-reliant in the wake of disaster, turning to special agencies like the Red Cross or the civil defence only as a last resort.

—"In almost every disaster, outside agencies underestimate the basic resources still available in communities. . . . The relief agencies tend to flood a disaster area with unneeded supplies."

—Research shows few verified cases of looting in disaster areas.

—"Contrary to popular belief, morale is high in the aftermath of disasters. . . . It creates a wall that excludes outsiders, many of whom have skills and resources that are needed. . . ."

Nader Raids AEC Generating Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) was urged Wednesday to declare a moratorium on all proposed nuclear power plants and those in early construction stages "until all safety-related issues are resolved."

The request was made by consumer advocate Ralph Nader and an organization called the Union of Concerned Scientists, who also recommended power reductions of up to 50 per cent for all 29 nuclear power plants now in operation in the U.S.

Seventy-six plants are currently on order and 55 others are in various stages of construction.

An AEC spokesman said the commission would have no immediate comment.

Nader and the scientists told a news conference that "the danger of catastrophic nuclear power plant accidents is a public safety problem of the utmost urgency in the country today."

Dr. Henry W. Kendall of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a spokesman for the scientists' group, said New York City, Toledo, Ohio, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., are especially vulnerable to catastrophic accidents because of their proximity to nuclear reactors.

Unless stringent safety steps are undertaken at this point, Nader said, the U.S. could well be faced with a "radioactive crisis" in the next 10 years. And this, he said, could well be much worse than "the alleged 'energy crisis'" already under wide discussion.

Nader said Kendall "has carried out calculations that indicate that lethal injuries could be received at up to nearly 100 miles from a nuclear reactor in which the emergency core-cooling system had failed during an accident ... and ... that such an accident could be the greatest peacetime disaster in our history."

Strongmen Facing Trials

KARACHI (AP) — A proposed new constitution for Pakistan opens the possibility of treason trials for the country's two previous rulers.

The draft of the new constitution labels as high treason the subversion of fundamental Pakistani law by force or other illegal means. Both former rulers, Gen. Mohammed Yahya Khan and Field Marshall Mohammed Ayub Khan, scuttled constitutional government on their rise to power.

The draft, with retroactive powers, was presented to the National Assembly Sunday. Opposition to the trial of Yahya has led to turmoil in the assembly and the threat of a boycott.

Ministers in President Zylfikar Ali Bhutto's government have said Yahya will be tried nevertheless, but they have given no date.

Friends said today Yahya wants an open trial to answer the accusations he led Pakistan into the December, 1971, war in which East Pakistan won its independence as Bangladesh.

He has been under house arrest since January, 1972.

Ayub has lived in quiet retirement in Islamabad since his downfall in 1969. He overthrew the constitution when he took power in a coup in September, 1958.

JFK's 'Other Side' Shown

NEW YORK (AP) — John Kennedy barking vocal exercises in the bathtub, seeking companionship on lonely evenings in the White House, pausing to write a note of encouragement to the mother of a badly burned child on the day his infant son died—these are the images of the late president in a new book written by two close friends.

David F. Powers and Kenneth P. O'Donnell, beer-drinking political buddies of long standing and White House confidants of John F. Kennedy, spent eight months after his assassination recording on tape their memories of Kennedy.

Those tapes now are a book, Johnny, We Hardly Knew Ye, an affectionate, personal remembrance produced with the help of writer Joe McCarthy.

O'Donnell reports one conversation, occasioned by the doubts he voiced concerning Kennedy's choice of Lyndon B. Johnson as his running mate in 1960.

"He said something to me that I am always going to remember: 'Get one thing clear, Kenny, I'm 43 years old, and I'm the healthiest candidate for president in the country, and I'm not going to die in office.'"

During the 1960 presidential campaign, the authors report, Kennedy did vocal exercises to preserve his voice. One of those exercises called for him to bark like a dog for 30 minutes every morning. Kennedy took to doing this in the bathtub.

SAW FUNNY SIDE

Kennedy's Roman Catholic religion which he liked to call "the canonical impediment" occasioned many of the witty one-liners recorded in the book.

Angered by the persistence of religion as an issue in the presidential primaries, Kennedy quipped: "I'm getting tired of these people who think I want to replace the Gold at Fort Knox with a supply of holy water."

What the authors add to the already-considerable Kennedy literature is a personal view only pals could have. He cursed occasionally, liked sports, was entranced by celebrities, and remembered others even at moments of personal travail.

When Patrick Bouvier Kennedy was born prematurely in August, 1963, Kennedy stayed at the Boston hospital where the baby was taken.

Awakened early one morning because the baby's condition was worse, Kennedy, while waiting for an elevator, saw a child who had been severely burned. He asked the mother's name, Powers said, then wrote a note of sympathy and encouragement to her.

Two hours later, the Kennedy baby died. Powers was with the President. "He went upstairs to the room where he had been sleeping, sat on the bed and wept."

LONDON (AP) — The government announced final approval Wednesday of a British airline's plan to operate a cheap daily "skytrain" service between London and New York.

Laker Airways now hopes to start flights, using jumbo jets carrying up to 345 passengers, later this year. The company still requires authorization from the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board.

MORE JOBS, PRICE STABILITY

New Proposals Favor West

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government met Parliament today by assigning "the highest priority" to reducing unemployment, containing inflation, and reorganizing existing social security programs.

In a proposal-packed throne speech opening the 29th Parliament, the government dedicated itself to expanding new job opportunities, promoting economic growth, attaining "reasonable price stability" and ensuring that all regions of the country benefit from the resulting prosperity.

The speech referred specifically to Western economic development.

"The government will propose to the governments of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba that they join with it in the convening of a conference on Western economic opportunities."

The meeting, suggested for the coming summer, would consider "concrete programs for stimulating and broadening the economic and industrial base of Western Canada."

The speech also indicated an overhaul of the regional economic expansion program. The department will be "decentralized to a greater degree to be in a better position to identify opportunities for economic development." There would be a review of research and development incentive programs "to improve their effectiveness."

Legislation to provide for a screening of foreign takeovers, presumably the same bill as introduced in the last session, would come before the new session. There would be the requirement that a majority of directors of federally-incorporated companies be Canadian.

The speech said the government will meet with the provincial governments in five regions of the country to examine the impact of freight rates on economic development and consumer prices. The railways have agreed to participate.

In the area of social policy, the government said the entire social security system, both federal and provincial elements, "must be reconsidered and reorganized, and made more sensitive to the needs of people in different parts of the country."

The system must ensure people who cannot work, such as the aged, the blind and the disabled, "a compassionate and equitable guaranteed annual income." For those who can work, the system must "contain incentives to work and a greater emphasis on the need to get people who are on social aid back to work."

There must also be "a fair and just relationship" between the incomes of people who are working near the minimum wage, the guaranteed incomes assured to those who cannot work, and the allowances paid to those who can work but are unemployed.

"It must be recognized that provinces may wish to have the structures of social security vary in accordance with the social needs, income standards and the cost of living in different communities."

Legislation would be introduced "to clarify certain aspects of the federal unemployment insurance plan and to prevent abuses that have not been overcome by the administrative actions already taken."

A new family-income security plan would be introduced. The speech did not indicate whether this would be the one defeated, by one vote, in the last session.

Subject to agreements with the provinces, the Canada Pension Plan would be changed to provide higher

Throne Speech Highlights

Measures to stimulate the economy and employment, including new aid to industry, exporters and co-operatives.

An overhaul of the social-security system to emphasize co-ordination with provincial programs, more aid for the disadvantaged, revised family allowances and amended unemployment insurance.

Efforts to achieve "reasonable price stability" to include a joint Commons-Senate inquiry into food prices.

Parliament to be asked for free vote, and urgently, to decide the future of capital punishment.

Action to improve housing, including a study of urban transport, aid in home purchase and a warranty system to protect purchasers.

A summer meeting of the federal and four western provincial governments to promote industrial, transport and financial development.

Measures affecting government, including proposals for broadcasting and televising parliamentary proceedings, for reducing conflicts of interest and controlling election expenses.

Fitness program to be expanded by more than doubling grants in the next three years.

'GIVE PARK NAME WITH SOME SNAP'

In a letter to Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, provincial resources minister Bob Williams said the present name is "rather colorless and meaningless" with a "commercial and international connotation."

Williams said in his letter, dated Dec. 27, that he prefers Wickaninnish or Maquinna, both names of former West Coast Indian chiefs.

Nixon Warns Doves

The Nixon administration has charged that the new surge of Democratic demands in Congress for a quick end to the Vietnam war may result in "possibly prolonging the negotiations".

The warning was issued on Nixon's behalf by White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler as Senate Democrats applied rising pressure on the peace question.

The Democrats indicated Congress should try to end the United States involvement in Vietnam unless a settlement is negotiated by Jan. 20, when Nixon begins his second term.

Democratic senators planned to consider today a proposal by Senator Edward M. Kennedy that would make it the policy of Congress to cut off all money for the Vietnam war immediately.

The only conditions on the cutoff, adopted by Democrats in the House of Representatives Tuesday, would be release of U.S. war prisoners and safe conduct for withdrawing U.S. forces.

Commenting on the Jan. 20 deadline, Ziegler said: "We are not going to set up an artificial timetable; we didn't do it in the elections and we won't now."

With negotiations due to resume in Paris on Monday, he said, "the president must proceed with negotiations and the policy he considers to be the right policy."

Ziegler, reading from notes, repeated more than a half dozen times, with slight variations, that "in such a sensitive stage of negotiations, members of Congress should ask themselves if they want to take the responsibility of raising doubts in the minds of the North Vietnamese about the U.S. position and thereby possibly prolonging the negotiations."

"Our objective is to achieve a negotiated settlement," the spokesman reiterated; "there can only be one negotiator."

In Paris, South Vietnam negotiator Pham Dang Lam demanded today that North Vietnam withdraw all of its military forces from the south and recognize the south as a fully independent nation — a demand Hanoi has repeatedly rejected.

The restatement at today's weekly semi-public session of the Paris talks of President Nguyen Van Thieu's undiminished conditions for peace was an indication of the further hard bargaining lying ahead for Henry Kissinger when he meets Hanoi's Le Duc Tho.

Washington administration officials already were warning against undue optimism and Ambassador William Por-

$110,000 home goes up in flames

$30,000 Antiques Lost in Housefire

A $110,000 luxury Gordon Head home is a total loss following an early morning fire on Vantreight Drive.

Saanich fire department were called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Towns, 4603 Vantreight at 2:50 a.m. Shortly after their arrival, the house's oil furnace exploded.

"From then on, it was a losing battle with the wind off the water," said Fire Chief Harold Gains.

The home's only occupant, Terry Towns, 17-year-old son of the owners of the property, escaped through a lower window unharmed as firemen appeared on the scene.

Firefighters were hampered by bitterly cold sea winds that turned "firemen into walking icicles," said the chief. Almost as soon as water was turned on the fire, it turned to ice.

Damage to contents, including antiques in the Towns' home was estimated at $30,000 today. A fuller list of damages still awaits an inspection by a B.C. fire marshal.

The Towns' property and contents were fully insured, Saanich fire department said.

A witness to the fire's outbreak, neighbor Betty Clazie, termed the scene "such a fantastic sight I could hardly believe my eyes."

She and her husband John, live at 4610 Vantreight, 150 yards from the scene of the disaster. They were awakened in the early hours by the crackling of the fire. It was Mr. Clazie who gave the fire alarm.

Fog Piles Up Cars

TURIN, Italy (AP) — At least 13 persons died today in traffic accidents caused by fog or freezing rain in Italy and Germany. Five French truck drivers died in one pile-up near Turin. Italian police said the fog-shrouded autostrada was blocked for 10 hours by the 10-vehicle chain collision.

Passengers Escape

BOSTON (AP) — About 250 passengers made their way above ground today after fire broke out in a rapid transit commuter train in a downtown tunnel, officials reported. Several persons were taken to hospitals, most for treatment of smoke inhalation, officials of the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority (MBTA) said. One passenger was on the danger list.

Mintoff Leaves

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — prime Minister Dom Mintoff flew to Libya today without notice, apparently seeking support in his squabble with the British. Col. Muammar Kadafi, the Libyan leader, sent a jet for Mintoff. The purpose of the visit was not announced, but it was assumed that it was connected with Mintoff's demand for more rent for the British bases. He wants another 10 per cent to compensate for the devaluation of the pound.

CAIRO STUDENTS IN NEW CLASHES

Informed sources said about 1,500 students remained on the campus despite a government order Wednesday closing all the country's universities.

The order followed bloody clashes between police and more than 3,000 Cairo University students.

Several students and police were injured and a few students were seen being loaded into police vehicles at Ein Shams this morning. But during the early afternoon, witnesses said, all appeared quiet.

Cairo University was tense today but there was no sign of further student action. The students are demanding the release of dozens of their colleagues they say are being held by the authorities following the distribution of anti-state leaflets.

Ex-Legislator Dies at 93

GOLDEN (CP) — Thomas King, former British Columbia cabinet minister, has died in Golden at the age of 93.

King was first elected to the legislature for Columbia as a Liberal in 1931 and contested five more elections before retiring in 1952. He served at one time as minister of public works and railways.

A native of Angus, Ont., he moved to Vancouver in 1897 and two years later he settled in Golden.

All 4 Parties Back Lamoureux

OTTAWA (CP) — Lucien Lamoureux, with the approval and praise of the four political parties, again was elected Commons Speaker today during the ritualistic opening of Canada's 29th Parliament.

Prime Minister Trudeau described the bilingual independent member for Stormont-Dundas as perhaps the "greatest Speaker since Confederation" in a speech nominating Lamoureux.

RELIGION BUGS REDS

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union displayed concern today that Western radio broadcasts with religious themes are having some effect on Soviet citizens.

An article in the trade union newspaper Trud attacked the broadcasts as "purposeful propaganda of militant anti-Communists striving to undermine socialism from within."

Former Tory Leader George Drew Dies

Times News Services

TORONTO — Former premier and one-time national Progressive Conservative leader Geroge Drew, 78, died today in a Toronto hospital where he had been a patient since suffering a heart attack, Nov. 19.

Drew was national leader of the Progressive Conservative party between 1948 and 1956.

As premier of Ontario before that, his victory in the provincial general election of 1943 began an unbroken 29 years of Conservative government in the province.

His death followed by only eight days that of former prime minister Lester B. Pearson, an old House of Commons opponent.

In a long period of public life after service in the First World War, Drew followed a varied career as an author, lawyer, civil servant and municipal official. He was mayor of his native city of Guelph, Ont., at the age of 31.

He became leader of the Ontario Conservative party in 1938 and five years later toppled the Liberal government of Harry Nixon.

The Conservatives have been in power in Ontario ever since.

After five years as premier, he took over leadership of the party nationally following the resignation of John Bracken, former Liberal-Progressive premier of Manitoba.

Drew's career as Ontario premier was at times tempestuous as he belligerently tackled the powerful federal government of Liberal W. L. Mackenzie King and crashed head on with a strong CCF co-operative Commonwealth Federation group that formed the official opposition when he took office with a minority government.

The 1946 federal-provincial conference to revise wartime tax agreements foundered on his refusal, along with that of Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, to accept federal proposals.

In provincial politics, the CCF accused him of maintaining a "Gestapo," but in a lurid election campaign in 1945 he won a decisive victory and beat down the CCF to the third position behind the Liberals.

His second administration brought the controversial introduction of cocktail bars to Ontario. Feelings ran so high on this issue that in the 1948 general election, though Drew's administration was returned with a reduced majority, he lost his Toronto High Park seat to a CCF temperance candidate.

His almost eight years as Opposition leader in the Commons, during which the Liberals won landslide victories at the polls in 1949 and 1953, were turbulent, as was his later diplomatic career.

He was 62 when, in 1956, he made the "heartbreaking decision" of resigning after a series of illnesses and rigorous parliamentary sessions left him ailing and exhausted.

The next year he was named high commissioner to the United Kingdom by John Diefenbaker, an old colleague and leadership rival who had broken the Liberal grip on office in 1957.

He stayed in London until early 1964.

Province May Appeal Salt Spring Ruling

The provincial government may appeal a decision by Judge M. L. T. Drake allowing the sale of 82 quarter-acre lots on Salt Spring Island.

The parcel of land in question, near Walker's Hook four miles north of Ganges, and owned by local building contractor A. S. Bains and lawyer Robert Heath, was approved for subdividing in 1891 under the name of Grantsville.

In July of this year the superintendent of insurance — a government official with power to freeze land sales — froze the sale of lots temporarily because there were no sewage facilities or water supplies on them, and it was not possible to obtain building permits.

The developers appealed the ruling in county court Dec. 11 and on Dec. 22 the judge allowed the appeal.

The developers appealed the ruling in country court Dec. 11 and on Dec. 22 the judge allowed the appeal saying, "It is clear (in the prospectus) that no purchaser of a lot in the subdivision would be able to construct any sort of permanent dwelling now — or indeed in the foreseeable future."

Lawyer Brian Smith, representing the government in the case, said he is awaiting the government's decision on whether or not to appeal the judge's ruling.

He said the appeal would be based on an "erroneous decision in law on the scope of the superintendent's power."

Although the judge said the prospectus had been approved, and the conditions of the sale were clearly outlined, Smith termed this type of sale a "commercial rip-off" and said the superintendent has the authority to refuse the sale if it's "generally in the public interest."

Chief Medical Health Officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread testified Dec. 11 that he had visited the subdivision and had found that the lots were generally too small to contain both a proper septic tank and tile field for sewage disposal and a well for water.

Regulations are that a well must be at least 100 feet from sewage disposal facilities and often, for safety, it is necessary to place the two 300 feet apart, he said.

This could be accomplished by placing them at opposite ends of each lot but because the lots are close together only about one-third of them could be serviced, he testified.

Whitbread said today, if the government does appeal Drake's ruling, the health board's position is unchanged.

Heath said there is a possibility the promoters may put in a water system but they are under no obligation to do so.

Heath said there is still a possibility that the promoters will put in a water system but they are under no obligation to do so.

Bains said, "These are a speculative type of lot" and "they even have to sign a letter saying that they can't apply for a building permit."

"This is not a subdivision like you see in the city. It's a recreation facility . . . it's a retreat," he said.

Superintendent of Insurance Tom Cantell said, "I doubt that anybody who buys a lot there is going to want to camp on it. They're going to want to build."

He said if the government decides to appeal the case he will freeze the sale of lots until the matter is settled.

UNIONS QUERY HEALTH PLANS

The British Columbia Federation of Labor will be asked to investigate discriminatory features of union health and welfare plans.

The move came at the Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night, after delegates voted to go into a closed session which lasted 45 minutes.

Today, asked what was decided, council secretary Larry Ryan said delegates approved a motion which said the council "deplores and requests the B.C. Federation of Labor to investigate union health and welfare plans that discriminate against individuals that are not members of the union-sponsored plans."

He declined to expand or comment on the motion "because the council went into committee of the whole."

UVic Slates Parliament

Another Liberal minority government will sit in power over the weekend when the University of Victoria holds their sixth model parliament in the legislative buildings.

The two-day sitting in the legislative chambers will be open to the public and session times are Saturday 9:30 a.m. to 12:30, 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. and Sunday 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 and 2 to 5 p.m.

Following student elections the model federal parliament will include 21 Liberals under Dolly Marks, 17 NDP under Ron Armstrong and 12 Conservatives under John McVie.

Jobless Peak Didn't Come

An expected peak in unemployment in the Lower Mainland area during December and January just isn't materializing, said the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) today.

About 80 casual employees in the Vancouver, Burnaby and New Westminster UIC offices, hired to handle the expected jump in enquiries about unemployment insurance, are being laid off.

Unaudited UIC figures for December show unemployment in the province was not much different than it was in December, 1971, a spokesman said. Then, there were 85,972 on the unemployment insurance rolls.

The mild winter this year may have been a factor keeping unemployment from taking its expected jump, said the spokesman. People working in the interior or outdoors who normally come to Vancouver in December to go on unemployment, may have been able to continue working this year, he said.

Any drop in expected numbers of unemployed hasn't affected Victoria, said Alison Fink, Victoria district manager of the UIC.

"Certainly our load was not down," she said, and no casual employees will be laid off by the Victoria office. Casual employees make up about half of the 100-odd staff of the office in winter, said Miss Fink.

Extra Seat for Island Draws MPs' Approval

Favorable reaction was registered today by the four Island MPs affected by the proposed electoral realignment which will give Vancouver Island a fifth, shared seat in the House of Commons.

"I think its wonderful that there'll be another constituency on the Island," Esquimalt-Saanich MP Donald Munro said from Ottawa today.

Alberni will now be in the same riding as Nanaimo, which is no longer included in the Cowichan-Malahat-the Islands constituency.

"My initial reaction, given the population distribution, is that the shift seems logical," Comox-Alberni MP Tom Barnett said.

"There's a certain nostalgia about changing your constituents," Barnett said, "but a good part of what they're proposing concerns commonality of interests.

"There's an association between Powell River and Comox — they're both pulp and paper towns."

Barnett agreed the shift of Hornby and Denman Islands to the Nanaimo-Alberni riding might be a problem since the islands seem more closely tied to the Comox region, but said he felt such details could be worked out at tthe public hearings to be held next month.

"It's in the best interests of my riding," Henry Olaussen, Coast Chilcotin MP said.

"The coast has always been like an unwanted prima donna. We were mixed with the Cariboo before with nothing in common.

"We have a lot in common with the Island," Olaussen continued. "And federally we're more concerned with people problems that pertain to Canada as a whole."

Tommy Douglas, MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-the-Islands, said he was happy about the new seat but sorry that the realignment meant losing Nanaimo from his riding.

"Protests will definitely be made about where they've drawn the line," Douglas said.

"Some parts, the suburbs, of Nanaimo are in differen, ridings. I think the commission would have done better to have gotten into a car and driven around the area. It seems they didn't realize there's a range of mountains running down the centre of the Island."

Douglas said he flet there was no political bias or "sunister design" the commission's decisions, and other MPs agreed the commission was impartial.

All four MPs expressed anger at not being given a copy of the new electoral map, which may be altered following public hearings, in February and will probably not come into effect until early next year.

"I think as a matter of courtesy the seated members should have been given a map instead of having to hear about through the newspapers," Munro said.

Munro said the loss of View Royal in his constituency was a matter of necessity due to population.

"There has to be a boundary," he explained, "and as long as voters have adequate knowledge of where they belong it should work out. We were such a big constituency before."

There are no changes in the Victoria riding.

ter, the chief U.S. negotiator, said in a sombre speech today, "I am not inclined at all to underestimate the problems which exist and which will face us still for some time." He did not endorse the Saigon demands in his statement.

Meanwhile on the war front, U.S. warplanes took advantage of clearing weather to step up attacks south of North Vietnam's 20th parallel bombing boundary that runs 65 miles south of Hanoi.

In ground action in South Vietnam, the Saigon command said today North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces stepped up their attacks Wednesday and early today to the highest point in more than two months. A command spokesman listed 116 "enemy-initiated incidents" between dawn Wednesday and daybreak today.

The U.S. command reported 106 jet fighters and 11 waves of B-52s lashed North Vietnam's lower panhandle. Navy pilots sank 13 supply barges at the mouth of the Sonng Ma River, just below the 20th parallel. Trucks in parking lots and on the highways were bombed by other navy air force planes and pilots reported destroying "numerous" vehicles in the raids.

The U.S. command said today marked the 263rd consecutive day of the U.S. bombing campaign over North Vietnam ordered by Nixon April 6 in reply to the Communist spring offensive in South Vietnam.

The prime minister would propose a spring meeting with provincial premiers "to plan further steps in the harmonization of goals, policies and programs for the benefit of all Canadians, particularly in fields that bear on the responsibilities of both levels of governments."

Parliament would be asked to confirm the basic principles of the bilingualism program in the public service.

And, under the objectives of the Official Languages Act, provinces will be offered further assistance to ensure that Canadians can educate their children in the language of their choice; that students can learn, as a second language, the other official language and that "provincial governments can develop an increased capacity to serve their citizens in both official languages, as may be required."

In the field of housing the speech forecasts, in co-operation with the provinces, a series of measures to help home owners.

These would be assistance in providing low-cost housing and other accommodation for senior citizens, assistance to low-and-moderate-income families, new incentives through co-operatives and non-profit corporations, assistance in rehabilitating older neighborhoods, a land-assembly program and encouragement to investors to make more money available for house-buyers.

An upper weather system moving southward through B.C. today will be accompanied by a band of cloud and snowflurries. The snowflurries will continue into Friday morning along the south coast. Strong outflow winds will redevelop in some mainland valleys and coastal inlets.

The glasses have been ordered by the B.C. Hotels Association and several hotel supply wholesalers, not by the LCB as reported in Wednesday's Times.

FAIRVIEW, Alta. (CP) — A 13-year-old youth from Fort Nelson, B.C., was killed when the scarf he was wearing became tangled in the starting mechanism of a snowmobile.

A police spokesman said the youth was driving the machine on a local golf course and the accident occurred when he stopped to make adjustments to the machine's exhaust system.

Remember the old way of borrowing, when you had to have it to get it?

At Toronto Dominion, that kind of thinking has gone by the boards. TD's Cash-flow way to borrow puts the emphasis where it belongs. On the money you earn. Here's how it works:

You figure out the money you'll have coming in over the period of a year. And how much you plan to spend during this period. The difference between your income and your outgo is a guide to the amount you can comfortably repay when you borrow. And that's really about all we need to know for a Cash-flow Loan. So if there's something you've been thinking about that requires more money than you have at the moment, talk to your TD Manager. He'll help you work out a Cash-flow Loan. That's Toronto Dominion's new way to borrow. If it helps you live the way you want to live, we think it makes good sense.

Is This Secretive Group Doing a Job for City?

What is the Advisory Planning Commission, what does it do and what should it be doing?

These are some of the questions examined by Times city hall reporter Paul Moss in a three-part series starting today.

The introductory article discusses the strangely anonymous, secretive character of the APC in Victoria, its origins and its influence on the way Victoria has developed in the last decade and a half.

It also looks at the general role of advisory planning commissions in the community, actual and potential.

Part 2 on Friday gives a cross-section of views on the city's planning commission, including suggestions for broadening its membership and criticisms of its cumbersome method of operation.

The final article in the series cites an example of a successful advisory planning commission in B.C. and shows how this provides vigorous community representation and a citizen's voice in the planning process.

Part 3 also discusses the importance of an overall plan for Victoria and the major contribution the APC can make toward this objective.

Far-Reaching Changes in City Determined by APC

The Shadow Council With Power to Burn

By PAUL MOSS, Times Staff

VAPC stands for Victoria Advisory Planning Commission, but cynics could be excused for suggesting the first two letters are short for Very Anonymous.

The simple fact is that the Advisory Planning Commission is no more in the public eye than the upper echelons of the Mafia or the Central Intelligence Agency.

Yet, strictly in the context of Victoria's physical development, the APC wields (or has the potential to wield) almost as much power as those organizations do internationally. And it does so in an apparent void — accountable to no one for its decisions, holding its meetings behind closed doors and withholding minutes of those meetings from public scrutiny.

The commission has functioned thus since it was first established by bylaw in 1958 as one of the chief instruments with which the city would shape its planning policies, on the mould of citizen opinion.

Those 14 years have seen more dramatic, far-reaching changes in the fabric of Victoria than ever before in its history and the changes have, to a greater or lesser degree, been determined by the attitudes of the APC.

★

Along the way, however, this group has rarely attracted more than a passing glance from anyone, as the meagre file of clippings in the newspaper's library shows only too clearly.

In recent months, the only attention has been critical, much of it coming from Mayor Peter Pollen.

Never one to mince words, Pollen said earlier this year that the commission had been used as "a vehicle for political patronage and promises . . . of clandestine relationships . . . you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours."

On another occasion, Ald. Alf Hood became vocally impatient at the length of time taken by the APC in dealing with an important planning study on the Old Town.

Although such isolated expressions of discontent add up to no particular pattern, there are indications that the commission may be undergoing some critical study at city hall over the next few months.

Almost certainly playing an important part in that review will be alderman-elect Sam Bawlf, who recently advocated complete restructuring of the advisory planning procedure in the city to enable the establishment of several "local area commissions," so that neighborhoods would have a say in planning matters affecting them.

It is doubtful whether all this will produce a totally new-look commission, exposed to the rude public stare, warts 'n all.

But, as Pollen has pointed out, the APC is in the throes of evolution and changes there will be, not least in its role and method of operation.

What are advisory planning commissions and what do they do?

Under the B.C. Municipal Act a local council may establish a commission, usually composed of public-spirited citizens and aldermen, with the rather vague purpose of advising it on planning matters.

According to the Community Planning Association of Canada a commission's role is to "give advice and act as the citizen's voice in the (planning) process."

The key word is advice: a commission can do no more than offer it. Only council itself, as the elected governing body within the community, can make decisions on planning matters — although in practice it rarely happens that the city commission's advice is ignored by council.

(One reason for this could be that five of the nine city council members including the mayor are also members of the commission).

The commission members, in turn, rely on the professional planner for advice. Their membership often includes such persons as architects, engineers and developers but that doesn't make the APC a group of "lay planners," as many mistakenly believe.

One idealistic view of the commission's role is that it should provide a forum for citizen opinion to assist both planner and council, and also act as a "sounding board" for testing planning policies and proposals before these are explored in detail by council and planning staff.

A criticism of the system some years ago by the Planning Institute of British Columbia was, until the beginning of last year, valid in its application to the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission.

In a brief to the provincial government, the institute said a commission's value in the larger urban centres "becomes highly suspect in this increasingly complex age (particularly where the commission becomes the bastion of the status quo and — or overly concerned with detail). Attempts to have the commission deliberate long-range alternatives have not met with much success."

It was because then-newly-elected Mayor Peter Pollen felt that the APC was "overly concerned with detail," that he made one significant change in its workload last January.

★

The time-consuming chore of considering routine rezoning applications was taken away from the commission and handed to council's planning committee. At that time, Pollen expressed the hope that this would free the APC for the major task of debating important planning studies and over-all development concepts.

The past 12 months have seen that hope only partially realized.

Ald. Mike Young, planning committee chairman, explains why:

"Unfortunately, the commission meets once or at the most twice a month. It is fairly unwieldy and not suitable for the ingestion of vast amounts of material or the provision of a great number of ideas.

"In these respects they are lagging. I think it's recognized by the members themselves — they realize the workload for the amount of time available is far too great.

"As an instrument of planning policy we were expecting too much of the APC."

FRIDAY: A sampling of views on how the Advisory Planning Commission functions in Victoria, and suggestions for making it a more representative, effective — and fair — instrument in the planning process.

Warm Air Might Bring Snow

A trough of warm air will ease the icy clamp on Victoria today but it will be short-lived.

Moving down from the B.C. interior, the warmer air could bring some snow flurries.

In Nanaimo and Vancouver, the temperature dipped to 16 while at Campbell River residents shivered under 15 degree temperatures.

A power failure, lasting three hours, plagued the Nanaimo area Wednesday night. Snowfall varied about 2½ inches being recorded at Cassidy airport, 10 miles south of Nanaimo; seven inches in Wellington and five inches in downtown Nanaimo.

Forest Branch 'Minimizes' Runaway Slash Fire Costs

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The B.C. Forest Service is camouflaging the responsibility of industry for runaway slash fires, Victoria Sierra Club chairman John Willow charged today.

Willow said the government service is "minimizing the losses."

The charge follows a forest service report Wednesday that slash-burning fires destroyed 6,500 acres of forest on Vancouver Island causing damages tentatively estimated at $50,000.

The fires resulted in protests from conservationists and some professional foresters as the damage involved public lands. So far several companies have been fined for not complying with regulations.

Two Canadian Forestry Service scientists have since suggested that slash-burning operations be managed by experts instead of company logging crews.

Willow said in estimating forest losses, the service did not include job loss or company profits, cost of replanting, loss of wood fibre.

"On the other hand in forest fires ascribed to other causes all those losses are taken into consideration," he said. "You have just to read the B.C. Forest Service annual report."

Willow also noted that slash-burning fires are listed under brush-burnings, instead of industrial fires.

"Ironically, he add, "if the B.C. Wildlife Branch should request that a belt of trees be left standing along a river bank, the service will oppose it mainly on job losses and the loss of timber," he said.

"For immature timber we calculate our losses on a table last revised in 1960," he said. "It needs revision as it does not take into consideration the loss of timber in the future."

He also admitted cost of replanting, job losses, loss of future timber and loss of equipment are not included in fire fighting costs.

"Our fire-fighting costs do not reflect the various losses, but we have to use some formula in estimating our damages," he said.

"Our information is mostly supplied by the forest industry and sometimes we are suspicious that it is either exaggerated or minimized," he said. "But that's the game."

Willow said the spokesman had been frank but he did not see how he could argue that fire losses were not being minimized.

"We know all data on tree farm licences are supplied by the industry," he said. "But it is not right. It is like letting a mouse in a cheese factory."

"We are not opposed to industry making a profit from forest lands," he added. "All we want is proper management."

Target: Waterfront Property

B.C. is not moving fast enough to acquire and set aside shoreline property for public use, Lloyd Brooks, deputy minister of recreation, says in a report published by the Planning Institute of British Columbia.

The deputy warns there are certain social and economic changes which indicate waterfront property will be increasingly at the focal point of the resource controversy in the future.

"People get very vocal about the threat of loss of rights to access, visual or otherwise," he said. "Every social and economic trend indicates a vastly growing demand for this finite resource."

He said the trend is reflected in the spectacular splurge in the products used in the pursuit of leisure — camping gear, boats, second homes. These all demand space and access to water.

Another aspect of this trend is the race for vacation home land which extends into Canada from the United States, he said.

This has resulted in pressures on choice waterfront areas, he said. Property prices have risen to such an extent that it is difficult for B.C. residents to get land or for park authorities to buy land for the public.

BROOKS

"There are something like 200,000 leisure homes built every year in the U.S.," he stated. "There are 9,000 vacation land development firms in the U.S. Most of these tend to be water-oriented in the lands they are developing. They are running out of suitable land and are extending their operations into Canada on a large scale."

He said there are 10,000 American boats entering Georgia Strait every year. This number is increasing at roughly 10 to 12 per cent per year.

Brooks said B.C. has misused its shoreline especially near and in urban areas.

He advocates detailed inventories of the shoreline, and a study of their capabilities somewhat like what has been done by the U.S. government.

Brooks also believes both provincial and federal governments should be involved in setting aside waterfront property.

He said the parks branch is working on a program to acquire key islands and waterfront areas in Georgia Strait.

"We have an objective in the parks branch to set up a chain of parks which will be a short travel distance apart all the way up the Island groups," he states. "We have 108 provincial park proposals in and about the Strait of Georgia region.

$10,839 Given To Bangladesh

Greater Victoria residents donated $10,839.81 to last year's Housing for Bangladesh appeal of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

The total is down $6,000 from the year before when Victoria gave $16,641, the highest amount since the annual campaign started here in 1953.

Money raised by the national campaign will support 100 Unitarian Service Committee (USC) projects in Africa, India, Korea, Hong Kong and Bangladesh.

This year's special project is to build houses for Bengali refugees who returned to Bangladesh after the civil war there in 1971 to find their homes destroyed.

The USC pledged to build 1,000 houses, costing $140 each, by Christmas Day. Each is 10'x14', with matted bamboo walls and a corrugated iron roof. The USC's partner agency in India, the Rama Krishna Mission, is supervising the building.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director of the USC, was hoping to raise $1 million in funds and $500,000 in gifts in kind in this year's campaign. Dr. Hitschmanova has been in charge of the USC since she founded it in 1945.

Top Class TV for North

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

TORONTO (CP) — There are children scattered in small Northern Ontario communities who may have never seen an automobile and who live on dirt floors.

But they also may have better educational television than children in some major U.S. or Canadian cities.

In 17 isolated schools the Ontario Educational Communications Authority OECA has installed modern videotape-fed television sets, which show up to 30 half-hour tapes a month.

Although the service has completed a year's operation with effusive praise from the local teachers, it has been kept in existence only through improvised OECA financing.

Ron Dodge, assistant supervisor of school youth programs, explained in an interview that the original agreement provided for the Ontario ministry of education to take over the program's expenses this school year. But the ministry failed to do so, perhaps because of a general restraint on its spending.

Faced with the alternative of abolishing the service, OECA decided to take on the unplanned cost of the program.

"To place this kind of facility in the school and develop some degree of reliance on this kind of resource in the school and then after a year take it out would be a travesty."

Mr. Dodge saw the service as being of tremendous value in the communities involved, which were selected because they were unable to receive the signal of any television stations carrying OECA programs.

"In very many of them, the main street is a railway line. There are no roads. These kids have never seen a car . . ."

Well-Equipped

Although the schools — mostly one or two room — are comfortable and reasonably well-equipped, Mr. Dodge said, the rest of the community may be primitive. Speaking of a spot north of Nipigon:

"In that Ferland area, for example, they have an excellent school, a large school, two classrooms plus the teacher's apartment at the back with two bedrooms, kitchen, and living room combined, washroom, this sort of thing, flush toilets for the children.

"And yet in the community itself, their homes are unheated, they are living on dirt floors — not dirty floors, but I mean there is just no wood on the floor. There are no roads.

"To go down to the lake where aircraft will land, they will have to walk down a footpath that is 1½ to two miles long and downhill, so that anything they pack that comes in by air they have to carry uphill.",

Only about 1,100 children are in the 17 schools involved, ranging from about 125 in Armstrong and 160 in the two Nakina schools to just over 20 in each of Ferland, Auden and Humphreyville.

Yet each has a $1,500 videotape machine, a $275 television monitor and the use of $900 in videotapes. Officials said they are unable to estimate the total cost of the program because so many portions of it are absorbed in general OECA services.

Mr. Dodge noted that not only the children benefit — in many communities the educational films are shown at night to parents also.

OECA reports show that the videotapes generally get good use, although some mistakes in selection have been made. One school got a program in German by error and a series on hockey was sent out after the hockey season.

Ideally, he said, the individual teachers should choose the programs. But they did not know what videotapes OECA has available.

Mr. Dodge said OECA is concerned about the possibility of cultural contamination:

"It would be dangerous and extremely arrogant, it seems to me, if we were to operate on the presumption that our objective were to citify these kids in these little communities and show them what life in the big city is like so they can be the same as the rest of us,

Choose Lifestyle

"This would be wrong. What it is our responsibility to do as we perceive it is to equip these children to make an intelligent choice about the lifestyle that they would use later on.

"You ought not to, and we're careful not to, convey values to these children that would destroy the credibility of the lifestyle in which they now are existing."

All too frequently, he said, such people who move to the cities end up at the bottom of the economic ladder.

"But they must be given the choice. And the choice must reside within themselves, not be made for them."

DDT Mouse Tests Show Small Danger

LYONS, France — Tests of some 5,000 mice at the new International Agency for Research on Cancer here have shown that even at the lowest levels of DDT added to the diet, an increased incidence of tumors in males was observed.

At the same time, continuing studies of human populations long exposed to DDT have shown no rise in cancerous tumors that could be attributed to the insecticide.

The findings therefore reinforce the view that the use of DDT should be avoided where alternate means are practicable, but not where it is the only weapon against such carriers of lethal disease as malarial mosquitos and tsetse flies.

The results of the mouse tests are supported by other experiments conducted recently in Milan and Moscow. The experiments here were described in a recent interview by Dr. Vladimir Turusov of the Soviet union, who is in charge of pesticide research at the cancer center. The latter is an agency of the World Health Organization set in this city in 1967.

On Turusov's desk is a vial containing a mouse's liver tumor that grew to one-third the total body weight of a normal mouse. While such tumors are common, particularly in mice receiving 250 parts of DDT to a million parts of food, only rarely do they seem malignant.

Of 185 liver tumors found in 497 mice being given various dosages of DDT, only four showed signs of spreading in a malignant manner. However, many mice had tumors in more than one organ.

Even at the lowest dose rate of two parts of DDT per million, tumor incidence in male mice was significantly higher compared to those fed a normal diet. According to Turusov, liver tumors have occurred in 148 per cent of those receiving this low dose, compared to 22 per cent in those on normal food.

In female mice such tumors were rare both in those on the low dose and those on normal diet.

At the Institute of Experimental and Clinical Oncology in Moscow, treatment of cultures of mouse lung tissue exposed to DDT showed changes similar to those induced by known cancer — causing agents. However, work at the Research Institute of Oncology in Leningrad has shown less clearcut effects on rats exposed to DDT.

In addition to sponsoring such studies the agency here has supported analyses to assess the growing accumulation of DDT in human fat tissue. According to agency scientists, one of the world's highest levels is in Israel, apparently because DDT has been sprayed inside homes.

Another area of high burden of this pesticide is Thailand where males in the 25 to 44 age group showed levels of about 20 parts per million in their fatty tissue.

In a typical experiment 79 per cent of the males were affected and 71 per cent of the females.

In a parallel study at the National Institute for the Study and Cure of Tumors in Milan, none of the mice on tumors whereas some mice in all the dosage categories did so.

In its annual report for last year the agency said, however: "A preliminary evaluation would seem to indicate no correlation between DDT exposure and primary liver cancer and or cancer at other sites."

However, Turusov says his view is that the findings call for "caution' in using DDT.

Dr. Walter Davis of the agency cites the prolonged interval that has been found to elapse between certain types of exposure and the onset of cancer.

Thus cigarette smoking became widespread early in the century but the incidence of lung cancer did not hit its peak until 15 or 20 years later. Likewise, it was not until 25 years after some pregnant women were treated with stilbestrol to avert miscarriages that daughters born of such pregnancies developed cancer of the vagina.

Pensioners 'Forgotten'

LONDON (CP) — Two lonely deaths and a third case of severe poverty in a period of record-breaking Christmas spending have aroused concern about Britain's forgotten old folk who somehow slip through the welfare net.

Mary McCoy, a 68-year-old widow, lay dead for two months before being discovered by relatives Christmas Eve in her Liverpool apartment. She had choked to death after eating cardboard. There was no food in the apartment.

Barbara Nappin, 52, and unmarried, also died alone in her Portsmouth home in the midst of a crowded municipal housing development. Her body was not found for more than two months, until police broke in last Saturday.

Lucy Sparrow, 83-year-old widow, was found in time by a friend who called to see her Christmas Eve. She was eating a piece of lard for lunch and was in poor physical and mental condition. There was no other food in her Northamptonshire home, a municipal prefabricated cottage in filthy condition.

In the case of Mrs. McCoy, her relatives apparently thought she was staying with other members of the family and did not check with each other.

"We never realized she had been on her own so long," said her niece, Norma Medaloso.

Miss Nappin and Mrs. Sparrow, with no close relatives, had simply lost touch with the world, neighbors said later. Miss Nappin had a reputation for being unfriendly, but ever the welfare department had not kept in touch with her. Its file on her ended in 1970. Social security official John Brodgen said: "Miss Nappin slipped through the welfare net — she just slipped through."

Both The Daily Mirror and The Guardian said the tragic cases showed the need for more good-neighborly behavior.

In a front-page article headed "Who Cares?" Mirror Women's editor Marjorie Proops said Britons were well known for "keeping ourselves to ourselves.

"It's time we changed our withdrawn habits .... It's time we started being good neighbors."

The Guardian points out that the number of old folk is increasing. To enable them to face their last years in dignity, the newspaper says, local welfare departments should be backed by voluntary support from neighbors.

"It is the neighbor, not the social worker or even the family, who is the best and first line of defence against such tragedies ...."

The North London borough of Camden already has a "good-neighbor" scheme in which the council pays a small sum to about 200 persons, mostly retired, to aid the welfare department by visiting old folk and helping them with shopping.

"The basic thing is that neighbors should care," said one official, "and it is all too often the case that people in towns don't want to know their neighbors."

Grocery Bill Tops All

By REID MACLEAN

HALIFAX (CP) — Halifax pastor J. C. Mack probably has a larger grocery bill than any other man in the city.

His wife, Ollie, makes her weekly trip to the local food store, gathers her groceries and watches the sales clerk total the amount of close to $125 on the cash register.

That's a lot of money for a week's groceries but then Mr. Mack usually manages to feed about 70 people a day with what has been bought.

He's been doing that for two years now with the help of several volunteers, donations and the facilities of his Cornwallis Street Baptist Church.

The 70 or so daily recipients are elementary school children, who go to the church for a hot meal when the noon bell rings.

The "hot lunch" program for school children began in 1971 as a feature of the Christian social action program undertaken by the church to serve meals to children of working parents who otherwise might not have a nourishing noon lunch.

In 1971 an average of 35 children were involved in the program. In 1972 that number doubled.

Local volunteers and many of the teachers help make the program work which often means giving up their own lunch hour to help prepare the food, serve it and wash the dishes.

The cost of the program which operates during the school year averages $5,000 yearly and is obtained through local churches and individual donations.

Usually the meals include beef stews, hot soups, vegetables and desserts, all planned with the help of the dietary staff of the Izaak Walton Killam Children's Hospital.

Mr. Mack called the program a "most viable means of showing that the church is relevant in the social, as well as spiritual, needs of the people today."

He said the social benefits of gathering all the children together are often more important than the meal itself.

The social action program of the church also operates a clothing depot and plans to develop a special five-day-a-week program for senior citizens.

Pill Can Harm Unborn Babies

HALIFAX (CP) — Dr. H. Lawrence Vallet of Dalhousie University, a specialist in children's endocrine diseases, said recently the birth control pill does not harm women who take them in the same way that it could harm the fetus.

Dr. Vallet said in a statement Friday there are hormones similar to those used in the pill which have been shown to cause sexual ambiguity in the genetic female born to a mother having taken hormones early in pregnancy.

"Many reports have shown that the pill can in certain high risk women cause thombeombolic phenomena or bring about clinical diabetes mellitus," he said.

MORE JOBS, PRICE STABILITY

New Proposals Favor West

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government met Parliament today by assigning "the highest priority" to reducing unemployment, containing inflation, and reorganizing existing social security programs.

In a proposal-packed throne speech opening the 29th Parliament, the government dedicated itself to expanding new job opportunities, promoting economic growth, attaining "reasonable price stability" and ensuring that all regions of the country benefit from the resulting prosperity.

The speech referred specifically to Western economic development.

"The government will propose to the governments of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba that they join with it in the convening of a conference on Western economic opportunities."

The meeting, suggested for the coming summer, would consider "concrete programs for stimulating and broadening the economic and industrial base of Western Canada."

The speech also indicated an overhaul of the regional economic expansion program. The department will be "decentralized to a greater degree to be in a better position to identify opportunities for economic development." There would be a review of research and development incentive programs "to improve their effectiveness."

Legislation to provide for a screening of foreign takeovers, presumably the same bill as introduced in the last session, would come before the new session. There would be the requirement that a majority of directors of federally-incorporated companies be Canadian.

The speech said the government will meet with the provincial governments in five regions of the country to examine the impact of freight rates on economic development and consumer prices. The railways have agreed to participate.

In the area of social policy, the government said the entire social security system, both federal and provincial elements "must be reconsidered and reorganized, and made more sensitive to the needs of people in different parts of the country."

The system must ensure people who cannot work, such as the aged, the blind and the disabled, "a compassionate and equitable guaranteed annual income." For those who can work, the system must "contain incentives to work and a greater emphasis on the need to get people who are on social aid back to work."

There must also be "a fair and just relationship" between the incomes of people who are working near the minimum wage, the guaranteed incomes assured to those who cannot work, and the allowances paid to those who can work but are unemployed.

"... It must be recognized that provinces may wish to have the structures of social security vary in accordance with the social needs, income standards and the cost of living in different communities."

Legislation would be introduced "to clarify certain aspects of the federal unemployment insurance plan and to prevent abuses that have not been overcome by the administrative actions already taken."

A new family-income security plan would be introduced. The speech did not indicate whether this would be the one defeated, by one vote, in the last session.

Subject to agreements with the provinces, the Canada Pension Plan would be changed to provide higher

Throne Speech Highlights

Measures to stimulate the economy and employment, including new aid to industry, exporters and co-operatives.

An overhaul of the social-security system to emphasize co-ordination with provincial programs, more aid for the disadvantaged, revised family allowances and amended unemployment insurance.

Efforts to achieve "reasonable price stability" to include a joint Commons-Senate inquiry into food prices.

Parliament to be asked for free vote, and urgently, to decide the future of capital punishment.

Action to improve housing, including a study of urban transport, aid in home purchase and a warranty system to protect purchasers.

A summer meeting of the federal and four western provincial governments to promote industrial, transport and financial development.

Measures affecting government, including proposals for broadcasting and televising parliamentary proceedings, for reducing conflicts of interest and controlling election expenses.

Fitness program to be expanded by more than doubling grants in the next three years.

B.C. URGES NEW NAME FOR PARK

In a letter to Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, provincial resources minister Bob Williams said the present name is "rather colorless and meaningless", with a "commercial and international connotation."

Williams said in his letter, dated Dec. 27, that he prefers Wickaninnish or Maquinna, both names of former West Coast Indian chiefs.

Nixon Warns Doves

The Nixon administration has charged that the new surge of Democratic demands in Congress for a quick end to the Vietnam war may result in "possibly prolonging the negotiations".

The warning was issued on Nixon's behalf by White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler as Senate Democrats applied rising pressure on the peace question.

The Democrats indicated Congress should try to end the United States involvement in Vietnam unless a settlement is negotiated by Jan. 20, when Nixon begins his second term.

Democratic senators planned to consider today a proposal by Senator Edward M. Kennedy that would make it the policy of Congress to cut off all money for the Vietnam war immediately.

The only conditions on the cutoff, adopted by Democrats in the House of Representatives would be release of U.S. war prisoners and safe conduct for withdrawing U.S. forces.

Commenting on the Jan. 20 deadline, Ziegler said: "We are not going to set up an artificial timetable; we didn't do it in the elections and we won't now."

With negotiations due to resume in Paris on Monday, he said, "the president must proceed with negotiations and the policy he considers to be the right policy."

Ziegler, reading from notes, repeated more than a half dozen times, with slight variations, that "in such a sensitive stage of negotiations, members of Congress should ask themselves if they want to take the responsibility of raising doubts in the minds of the North Vietnamese about the U.S. position and thereby possibly prolonging the negotiations."

"Our objective is to achieve a negotiated settlement," the spokesman reiterated; "there can only be one negotiator."

In Paris, South Vietnam negotiator Pham Dang Lam demanded today that North Vietnam withdraw all of its military forces from the south and recognize the south as a fully independent nation — a demand Hanoi has repeatedly rejected.

The restatement at today's weekly semi-public session of the Paris talks of President Nguyen Van Thieu's undiminished conditions for peace was an indication of the further hard bargaining lying ahead for Henry Kissinger when he meets Hanoi's Le Duc Tho.

Washington administration officials already were warning against undue optimism and Ambassador William Por-

$110,000 home goes up in flames

Loss of $140,000 In Saanich Fire

A $110,000 luxury Gordon Head home is a total loss following an early morning fire on Vantreight Drive.

Saanich fire department were called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Towns, 4603 Vantreight at 2:50 a.m. Shortly after their arrival, the house's oil furnace exploded.

"From then on, it was a losing battle with the wind off the water," said Fire Chief Harold Gains.

The home's only occupant, Terry Towns, 17-year-old son of the owners of the property, escaped through a lower window unharmed as firemen appeared on the scene.

Firefighters were hampered by bitterly cold sea winds that turned "firemen into walking icicles," said the chief. Almost as soon as water was turned on the fire, it turned to ice.

Damage to contents, including antiques in the Towns' home was estimated at $30,000 today. A fuller list of damages still awaits an inspection by a B.C. fire marshal.

The Towns' property and contents were fully insured, Saanich fire department said.

A witness to the fire's outbreak, neighbor Betty Clazie, termed the scene "such a fantastic sight I could hardly believe my eyes."

She and her husband John, live at 4610 Vantreight, 150 yards from the scene of the disaster. They were awakened in the early hours by the crackling of the fire. It was Mr. Clazie who gave the fire alarm.

Mintoff Leaves

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Prime Minister Dom Mintoff flew to Libya today without notice, apparently seeking support in his squabble with the British. Col. Muammar Kadafi, the Libyan leader, sent a jet for Mintoff. He wants another 10 per cent to compensate for the devaluation of the pound.

CAIRO STUDENTS IN NEW CLASHES

Informed sources said about 1,500 students remained on the campus despite a government order Wednesday closing all the country's universities.

The order followed bloody clashes between police and more than 3,000 Cairo University students.

Several students and police were injured and a few students were seen being loaded into police vehicles at Ein Shams this morning. But during the early afternoon, witnesses said, all appeared quiet.

Cairo University was tense today but there was no sign of further student action. The students are demanding the release of dozens of their colleagues they say are being held by the authorities following the distribution of anti-state leaflets.

Former Tory Leader George Drew Dies

Times News Services

TORONTO — Former premier and one-time national Progressive Conservative leader Geroge Drew, 78, died today in a Toronto hospital where he had been a patient since suffering a heart attack, Nov. 19.

Drew was national leader of the Progressive Conservative party between 1948 and 1956.

As premier of Ontario before that, his victory in the provincial general election of 1943 began an unbroken 29 years of Conservative government in the province.

His death followed by only eight days that of former prime minister Lester B. Pearson, an old House of Commons opponent.

In a long period of public life after service in the First World War, Drew followed a varied career as an author, lawyer, civil servant and municipal official. He was mayor of his native city of Guelph, Ont., at the age of 31.

He became leader of the Ontario Conservative party in 1938 and five years later toppled the Liberal government of Harry Nixon.

The Conservatives have been in power in Ontario ever since.

After five years as premier, he took over leadership of the party nationally following the resignation of John Bracken, former Liberal-Progressive premier of Manitoba.

Drew's career as Ontario premier was at times tempestuous as he belligerently tackled the powerful federal government of Liberal W. L. Mackenzie King and crashed head on with a strong CCF co-operative Commonwealth Federation group that formed the official opposition when he took office with a minority government.

The 1946 federal-provincial conference to revise wartime tax agreements foundered on his refusual, along with that of Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, to accept federal proposals.

In provincial politics, the CCF accused him of maintaining a "Gestapo," but in a lurid election campaign in 1945 he won a decisive victory and beat down the CCF to the third position behind the Liberals.

His second administration brought the controversial introduction of cocktail bars to Ontario. Feelings ran so high on this issue that in the 1948 general election, though Drew's administration was returned with a reduced majority, he lost his Toronto High Park seat to a CCF temperance candidate.

New Proposals Favor West

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government met Parliament today by assigning "the highest priority" to reducing unemployment, containing inflation, and reorganizing existing social security programs.

In a proposal-packed throne speech opening the 29th Parliament, the government dedicated itself to expanding new job opportunities, promoting economic growth, attaining "reasonable price stability" and ensuring that all regions of the country benefit from the resulting prosperity.

The speech referred specifically to Western economic development.

"The government will propose to the governments of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba that they join with it in the convening of a conference on Western economic opportunities."

The meeting, suggested for the coming summer, would consider "concrete programs for stimulating and broadening the economic and industrial base of Western Canada."

The speech also indicated an overhaul of the regional economic expansion program. The department will be "decentralized to a greater degree to be in a better position to identify opportunities for economic development." There would be a review of research and development incentive programs "to improve their effectiveness."

Legislation to provide for a screening of foreign takeovers, presumably the same bill as introduced in the last session, would come before the new session. There would be the requirement that a majority of directors of federally-incorporated companies be Canadian.

The speech said the government will meet with the provincial governments in five regions of the country to examine the impact of freight rates on economic development and consumer prices. The railways have agreed to participate.

In the area of social policy, the government said the entire social security system, both federal and provincial elements, "must be reconsidered and reorganized, and made more sensitive to the needs of people in different parts of the country."

The system must ensure people who cannot work, such as the aged, the blind and the disabled, "a compassionate and equitable guaranteed annual income." For those who can work, the system must "contain incentives to work and a greater emphasis on the need to get people who are on social aid back to work."

There must also be "a fair and just relationship" between the incomes of people who are working near the minimum wage, the guaranteed incomes assured to those who cannot work, and the allowances paid to those who can work but are unemployed.

"It must be recognized that provinces may wish to have the structures of social security vary in accordance with the social needs, income standards and the cost of living in different communities."

Legislation would be introduced "to clarify certain aspects of the federal unemployment insurance plan and to prevent abuses that have not been overcome by the administrative actions already taken."

A new family-income security plan would be introduced. The speech did not indicate whether this would be the one defeated, by one vote, in the last session.

Subject to agreements with the provinces, the Canada Pension Plan would be changed to provide higher

All 4 Parties Back Lamoureux

OTTAWA (CP) — Lucien Lamoureux, with the approval and praise of the four political parties, again was elected Commons Speaker today during the ritualistic opening of Canada's 29th Parliament.

Prime Minister Trudeau described the bilingual independent member for Stormont-Dundas as perhaps the "greatest Speaker since Confederation" in a speech nominating Lamoureux.

B.C. URGES NEW NAME FOR PARK

In a letter to Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, provincial resources minister Bob Williams said the present name is "rather colorless and meaningless" with a "commercial and international connotation."

Williams said in his letter, dated Dec. 27, that he prefers Wickaninnish or Maquinna, both names of former West Coast Indian chiefs.

Nixon Warns Doves

The Nixon administration has charged that the new surge of Democratic demands in Congress for a quick end to the Vietnam war may result in "possibly prolonging the negotiations".

The warning was issued on Nixon's behalf by White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler as Senate Democrats applied rising pressure on the peace question.

The Democrats indicated Congress should try to end the United States involvement in Vietnam unless a settlement is negotiated by Jan. 20, when Nixon begins his second term.

Democratic senators planned to consider today a proposal by Senator Edward M. Kennedy that would make it the policy of Congress to cut off all money for the Vietnam war immediately.

The only conditions on the cutoff, adopted by Democrats in the House of Representatives would be release of U.S. war prisoners and safe conduct for withdrawing U.S. forces.

Commenting on the Jan. 20 deadline, Ziegler said: "We are not going to set up an artificial timetable; we didn't do it in the elections and we won't now."

With negotiations due to resume in Paris on Monday, he said, "the president must proceed with negotiations and the policy he considers to be the right policy."

Ziegler, reading from notes, repeated more than a half dozen times, with slight variations, that "in such a sensitive stage of negotiations, members of Congress should ask themselves if they want to take the responsibility of raising doubts in the minds of the North Vietnamese about the U.S. position and thereby possibly prolonging the negotiations."

"Our objective is to achieve a negotiated settlement," the spokesman reiterated; "there can only be one negotiator."

In Paris, South Vietnam negotiator Pham Dang Lam demanded today that North Vietnam withdraw all of its military forces from the south and recognize the south as a fully independent nation — a demand Hanoi has repeatedly rejected.

The restatement at today's weekly semi-public session of the Paris talks of President Nguyen Van Thieu's undiminished conditions for peace was an indication of the further hard bargaining lying ahead for Henry Kissinger when he meets Hanoi's Le Duc Tho.

Washington administration officials already were warning against undue optimism and Ambassador William Por-

$110,000 home goes up in flames

Loss of $140,000 In Saanich Fire

A $110,000 luxury Gordon Head home is a total loss following an early morning fire on Vantreight Drive.

Saanich fire department were called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Towns, 4603 Vantreight at 2:50 a.m. Shortly after their arrival, the house's oil furnace exploded.

"From then on, it was a losing battle with the wind off the water," said Fire Chief Harold Gains.

The home's only occupant, Terry Towns, 17-year-old son of the owners of the property, escaped through a lower window unharmed as firemen appeared on the scene.

Firefighters were hampered by bitterly cold sea winds that turned "firemen into walking icicles," said the chief. Almost as soon as water was turned on the fire, it turned to ice.

Damage to contents, including antiques in the Towns' home was estimated at $30,000 today. A fuller list of damages still awaits an inspection by a B.C. fire marshal.

The Towns' property and contents were fully insured, Saanich fire department said.

A witness to the fire's outbreak, neighbor Betty Clazie, termed the scene "such a fantastic sight I could hardly believe my eyes."

She and her husband John, live at 4610 Vantreight, 150 yards from the scene of the disaster. They were awakened in the early hours by the crackling of the fire. It was Mr. Clazie who gave the fire alarm.

Mintoff Leaves

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Prime Minister Dom Mintoff flew to Libya today without notice, apparently seeking support in his squabble with the British. Col. Muammar Kadafi, the Libyan leader, sent a jet for Mintoff. The purpose of the visit was not announced, but it was assumed that it was connected with Mintoff's demand for more rent for the British bases. He wants another 10 per cent to compensate for the devaluation of the pound.

CAIRO STUDENTS IN NEW CLASHES

Informed sources said about 1,500 students remained on the campus despite a government order Wednesday closing all the country's universities.

The order followed bloody clashes between police and more than 3,000 Cairo University students.

Several students and police were injured and a few students were seen being loaded into police vehicles at Ein Shams this morning. But during the early afternoon, witnesses said, all appeared quiet.

Cairo University was tense today but there was no sign of further student action. The students are demanding the release of dozens of their colleagues they say are being held by the authorities following the distribution of anti-state leaflets.

Former Tory Leader George Drew Dies

Times News Services

TORONTO — Former premier and one-time national Progressive Conservative leader George Drew, 78, died today in a Toronto hospital where he had been a patient since suffering a heart attack, Nov. 19.

Drew was national leader of the Progressive Conservative party between 1948 and 1956.

As premier of Ontario before that, his victory in the provincial general election of 1943 began an unbroken 29 years of Conservative government in the province.

His death followed by only eight days that of former prime minister Lester B. Pearson, an old House of Commons opponent.

In a long period of public life after service in the First World War, Drew followed a varied career as an author, lawyer, civil servant and municipal official. He was mayor of his native city of Guelph, Ont., at the age of 31.

He became leader of the Ontario Conservative party in 1938 and five years later toppled the Liberal government of Harry Nixon.

The Conservatives have been in power in Ontario ever since.

After five years as premier, he took over leadership of the party nationally following the resignation of John Bracken, former Liberal-Progressive premier of Manitoba.

Drew's career as Ontario premier was at times tempestuous as he belligerently tackled the powerful federal government of Liberal W. L. Mackenzie King and crashed head on with a strong CCF co-operative Commonwealth Federation group that formed the official opposition when he took office with a minority government.

The 1946 federal-provincial conference to revise wartime tax agreements foundered on his refusal, along with that of Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, to accept federal proposals.

In provincial politics, the CCF accused him of maintaining a "Gestapo," but in a lurid election campaign in 1945 he won a decisive victory and beat down the CCF to the third position behind the Liberals.

His second administration brought the controversial introduction of cocktail bars to Ontario. Feelings ran so high on this issue that in the 1948 general election, though Drew's administration was returned with a reduced majority, he lost his Toronto High Park seat to a CCF temperance candidate.

His almost eight years as opposition leader in the Commons, during which the Liberals won landslide victories at the polls in 1949 and 1953, were turbulent, as was his later diplomatic career.

He was 62 when, in 1956, he made the "heartbreaking decision" of resigning after a series of illnesses and rigorous parliamentary sessions left him ailing and exhausted.

The next year he was named high commissioner to the United Kingdom by John Diefenbaker, an old colleague and leadership rival who had broken the Liberal grip on office in 1957.

He stayed in London until early 1964.

His career was replete with
